UMT Bill Now Appears Sidetracked In House

Rules Chairman Allen Predicts Legislation Will Not Become Law

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Universal military training legislation, high on the Administration's list of "musts," last night appeared to have been sidetracked indefinitely in the House.

Although no formal action has been taken by the House GOP Steering Committee, House Rules Chairman Leo E. Allen (R., Ill.) told reporters:

"In my opinion, the bill will not become a law—under present (world) conditions. We can spend that money (500 million dollars) better elsewhere.)

Hearing Request Denied

Allen has repeatedly denied the request of House Military Chairman Walter G. Andrews (R., N. Y.) for hearings on the bill.

A petition to discharge Allen's Rules group, and force the bill to the floor, was filed in the House by Representative Henry D. Larcade, jr. (D., La.)

Yesterday the petition had only 13 signatures. A majority of the House (218) must sign to force the bill to the floor.

Senate May Act

Larcade flatly charged the House Republican leadership with blocking the legislation. He termed the thin support of his petition "discouraging but not hopeless. Many more will sign when they realize it is the only hope for getting the bill to the floor."

Failing to force action by petition, proponents of UMTC have two other recourses. They might try to get the bill up during a "calendar Wednesday" call of House committees. Or they might try to override Allen in his own Rules Committee. If, as expected the House leadership backs Allen, neither prospect is bright.

The possibility of the Senate acting meanwhile on an unreported companion bill may come up at the regular meeting of the Senate Military Affairs Committee today.

Truman to Ask Millions More For Greek Aid

President Truman yesterday pictured guerilla warfare as a continuing threat to the recovery and survival of Greece.

"If the guerilla menace should increase as a result of greater outside assistance," said the President, in a quarterly report to Congress on the Greek-Turkish aid program, "a new situation would be created which would have to be dealt with in the light of circumstances prevailing at that time."

In any case, the President, reported, additional military funds will be sought for Greece and Turkey "at the appropriate time." Secretary Marshall has already foreshadowed a request for such added funds, which have been estimated unofficially at about 200 million dollars.

Marshall Praises Mission

After the President's message was made public, Secretary of State George C. Marshall issued a statement apparently aimed at absolving the American aid mission in Athens of any blame for the situation.

"In the face of many difficulties, Governor Griswold and his staff are doing an outstanding job in carrying out their mission in accordance with the policies of this Government," Marshall said.

"I think the members of the mission have a right to be proud of the work they are doing in this service to Greece and the United States."

President Truman's report described the guerilla activities as warfare directed "against the people of Greece."

"It is," he wrote, "determined

Soviet Creates North Korean Puppet Rule

'People's Republic' And Army Declared Open Pact-Defiance

Seoul, Korea, Feb. 16 (AP).—The radio in Russian-held north Korea told today of a strong Korean army and "democratic people's republic" aimed at ruling all Korea under a hammer and sickle flag.

A highly placed American promptly charged both were Soviet puppets created in open defiance of international agreements and of the United Nations.

The broadcast from Pyongyang, Soviet occupation headquarters, said a constitution had been presented to the north Korean people's council but would not be finally voted until mid-March.

The American official said a puppet government already had been established in Pyongyang.

Army Put at 200,000

Also, he said, "we have ample information" on the north Korean army, estimated to total at least 200,000 men. It is reported equipped with Russian medium tanks, light planes and other modern weapons.

Broadcasts said the regime would one day embrace all Korea, with Seoul as its capital.

Seoul, traditional capital of Korea, is headquarters of the United States occupation zone, which covers half the country and includes 21 million of the 28 million population.

Flag Already Chosen

Pyongyang said a new flag already had been chosen—a red star with crossed hammers over it and crossed sickles below. (The field's color was not given.)

American officials in Seoul speculated the next Russian move might be to withdraw occupation forces in an attempt to cause the United States to do likewise.

(The Russians proposed last year that both forces get out. The Americans declined on grounds that it would hand the whole country over to the pro-Soviet north Korean army.)

Soviet Accuses U. S. of Secret Peace Attempt

Implicates Britain, Too; Dulles' Brother, of OSS, Calls Charge Nonsense

By Eddy Gilmore

Moscow, Feb. 16 (AP).—The Soviet Union charged tonight the United States and Britain talked peace terms with Germany during World War II.

It also accused Britain and France of seeking to start a war with Russia in 1940 instead of fighting Germany.

Russia said that Allen W. Dulles, a brother of John Foster Dulles, represented the United States in conversations with a German spokesman in 1942 which touched on the question of concluding peace with Germany.

The Soviet government also accused the Allies of failing to fulfill a promise of a second front in Europe in 1942 and 1943, and charged that leading Finnish circles sought to make Finland a springboard for Hitler's attack on Russia.

These charges were contained in the fourth installment of a Russian series designed to answer United States State Department's disclosure of documents dealing with Russian-German relations.

Moscow said it was the final installment before publication of documents which, it said, the Red Army captured from the Germans.

Referring to the documents relating to charges of United States and British peace talks, tonight's statement said:

"From these documents it can be seen that in the autumn of 1941 and also in 1942 and 1943 in Lisbon and in Switzerland, negotiations were carried on behind the back of the USSR between representatives of the United States and Germany on the subject of peace with Germany."

In alleged negotiations between United States and German representatives in Switzerland in February, 1942, the Soviet statement said, "The United States was rep-

Authority at Stake

U. N. Palestine Commission Asks Arms in Partition Crisis

By John G. Rogers

Lake Success, N. Y., Feb. 16 (NYHT)—The United Nations Palesting Commission told the Security Council today in a special report that it will not be able to carry out the partition of the Holy Land unless it is backed by military force of adequate strength by May 15.

If no such force is provided by the time the British surrender their Palestine mandate and policing responsibilities May 15, the commission said, the authority and effectiveness of the U. N. will be at stake in a chaos of "uncontrolled, widespread strife and bloodshed."

The Arab Higher Committee of Palestine, the commission said, officially warned the U. N. ten days ago that the only way to partition Palestine is first to kill every Arab man, woman and child in the land.

In addition, the commission asserted, "powerful Arab interests, both inside and outside Palestine are defying the (partition) resolution of the General Assembly, and are engaged in a deliberate effort to alter by force" the U. N. project to split the Holy Land into Arab and Jewish states.

Not only are the Arabs hostile, the commission said, but the British refuse to permit the Jews to organize a legal and efficient militia.

Accordingly, said the commission, it was its duty in the face of overwhelming and depressing evidence to submit the whole problem of partition enforcement to the Security Council.

And, in doing so, the commission stressed the "compelling need for prompt action," both to avert further great human suffering and bloodshed, and to hasten the supply of means and authority to carry out the U. N. decision on Holy Land Partition.

"In the view of the commission," the report said, "a basic issue of international order is involved. A dangerous and tragic precedent will have been established if force, or the threat of the use of force, is to prove an effective deterrent to the will of the United Nations."

But, despite the appeal for speed, it appeared tonight the council would not begin consideration of the report until next week at the earliest. At least a week's interval is likely because all members must consult home governments on the armed force question.

Beyond suggesting a force "of adequate strength," the commission did not specify any ideas on the size of the body of troops deemed necessary. Estimates have varied widely. The British have about 100,000 troops and auxiliaries on the scene. Some say that perhaps only two divisions of good troops that meant business would be sufficient.

The report included much testimony by the British, who are opposed to Palestine partition. The British painted a black future picture. Included were these facts or opinions:

From the time the U. N. approved partition up to February 1, Palestine casualties were 869 killed and 1909 wounded. Except for the presence of the British, the Jews and Arabs would al-

Conciliator Acts to Settle GSI Strike

FWA Names Strong Pursuant to Orders From White House

By Frank Wilder
Post Reporter

A conciliator appointed by Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming—pursuant to White House orders—went to work yesterday to settle the GSI cafeteria strike.

He is George E. Strong, 52-year-old attorney and veteran of both World Wars, with a broad background in settling labor disputes, both for the Army and the Government.

Appointed yesterday, Strong said he had aureadly held preliminary meetings with the disputing parties—first with top officials of Government Services, Inc., and later with negotiators for Local 471, United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers (UPW-CIO).

Strong Has Had Success

Fleming named Strong in the 43-day-old strike on the recommendation of Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach, one of Fleming's aides disclosed. Schwellenbach has used Strong before in tough labor situations, with consistent success.

Fleming's action, it was learned, was the direct result of White House orders that he bring GSI into discussions aimed at settlement of the strike—as The Washington Post said exactly a week ago. A White House official said yesterday Schwellenbach is still in over-all charge of getting the dispute settled.

Faces Refusal to Bargain

Strong was hopeful last night that he could resolve labor-management differences that have kept more than 1000 pickets around 40 of GSI's 42 cafeterias in Government buildings. Two of the cafeterias have been closed for the strike's duration.

"This is just another dispute," he said. "I've seen them much tougher than this."

Floe Pounds At Bridges; Overflow Threatened

Trees Snapped Off Like Toothpicks; Close Watch Kept At Brookmont, Md.

The ice-choked Potomac River was still threatening to overflow its banks above Washington at a late hour last night and drive river-bank residents in Maryland frfom their homes.

Army Engineers and the River Service Section of the Weather Bureau kept a close watch on the critical candition throughout the day and night.

The Army Engineers said tha situation was "somewhat less serious" at a late hour but that ice was still jammed in the river from Three Sisters Island, about a half-mile above Key Bridge, to an area past Chain Bridge, upriver.

The latest report from Leiter Gauge showed 9.9 feet. Flood level is 10 feet, as measured by the gauge.

The ice pack in the Potomac began disintegrating early yesterday. As the sheet of ice broke, giant-size slabs of ice went rumbling down the river. Trees along the banks were snapped loose like toothpicks.

Police Alert Residents

The flood danger developed when the ice floes jammed up at bridges across the Potomac. The most serious jam was from Key Bridge in Georgetown upstream beyond Chain Bridge.

In imminent danger of being flooded out of their homes were residents along the river banks in the vicinity of Brookmont, Md. Park police alerted them of the flood danger during the afternoon.

The Park Police said the Potomac had overflowed its banks in this area, acting as a temporary dam (the banks are low in this section) and the water was running into Lock 5 of the old C. & O. Canal. The canal, which runs parallel to the river, was emptied of water some months ago.

As the ice jammed up in the Potomac, the Coast Guard dispatched the cutter Mohican upstream to slice through the jam.

The ice floes, some of them several hundred feet in size, did some damage to bridges as they rumbled down the river.

Pilings Are Damaged

Some of the pilings at the Highway Bridge were damaged by the pressure of the big cakes of ice. At Memorial Bridge one of the wood fenders alongside the channel was crushed by the ice.

The ice piled up in jagged layers upstream. Shortly before 5 p. m., the Army Engineers said its latest information was that the water and piled ice had reached an elevation of 31 feet above normal at Chain Bridge. Several hours

Poland Arrests 5 Airmen Flying U. S. Ambassador

Warsaw, Poland, Feb. 16 (U.P.)—The United States Embassy said tonight five United States Army airmen who flew United States Ambassador Stanton Griffis to Warsaw tonight from Washington, D. C., have been arrested for failing to possess the proper visas.

Embassy officials said they were attempting to get clearances for the crew to fly to Berlin tomorrow. The men are held incommunicado, but are "well taken care of" at a hotel.

Agreed On in Principle

(FSA Urges Broadened Social Security Coverage and Activities. See Story on Page 3)

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

An "agreement in principle" has been concluded permitting Howard University medical students and graduates to serve as internes and residents at Gallinger Hospital.

Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security Administrator, confirmed the arrangement to The Washington Post last night. He said that he looked for the plan to get into operation beginning next fall.

The agreement was worked out with Ewing, Howard University and the District Commissioners, Ewing said, adding that a conference on specific details is scheduled for later this week.

The administrator asserted that George Washington and Georgetown medical schools have agreed to give up their exclusive arrangement to supply internes to Gallinger.

There are some 37 internships at Gallinger. It was not known what proportion of them will go to the Negro medics. The Gallinger patient load is 70 per cent Negro.

Opening Gallinger to Negro doctors has been a campaign pressed by Howard University, Negro medical groups and such civic organizations as the League of Women Voters.

Ewing said the District Commissioners were "most sympathetic" to the proposal and that Gallinger officials "showed every courtesy and consideration" to Howard's medical school dean, Joseph L. Johnson, who inspected Gallinger to determine the problems and possibilities.

Under the agreement, Ewing said, Howard professors will treat patients at Gallinger and take their students with them on their rounds. Some of the graduates will interne there, and the way is open for Negro doctors to receive some of the 35 residency jobs.

Superintendent Alvin R. Sweeney of Gallinger, said he had not been informed of any change in the situation on Negro internes but said discussions had been under way for some time. At present, he pointed out, Negro students are allowed to work in communicable disease wards at Gallinger.

Howard University now trains about half of the Nation's annual output of new Negro doctors. Ewing said that the factor limiting the number of graduates is interneship. At present, Freedmen's Hospital is the only local institution where Negroes may interne.

British Cruiser Heads South In Falkland Islands Dispute

London, Feb. 16 (U.P.)—The government announced today it was giving British authorities in the Antarctic region the "support they need" to protect British sovereignty against Argentine and Chilean claims.

The 8000-ton cruiser Nigeria left South Africa for the area, its crew singing Argentine tangos, after loading full war equipment including torpedos, and Antarctic clothing.

Minister of State Hector McNeil was asked in Commons whether Argentina had stopped or promised to stop its acts of trespass on Britain's Falkland Islands dependencies, off the southern tip of South America.

"No, sir," McNeil replied. "The Argentina and Chilean governments' naval forces are operating in British waters of the Falkland Islands dependencies with the declared object of enforcing claims to sovereignty in those areas.

"They have also landed parties and purport to set up a military command in British territory."

"Despite our declared willingness to settle legally, ostentatious naval and other demonstrations are made in an area which we administer and which everyone knows we consider British territory.

"It is not to be supposed, however, that we shall overlook the challenge to our authority."

The focal point of the difficulty with Argentina is tiny Deception Island in the South Shetlands group between Cape Horn and Antarctic Graham Land.

Last week dispatches said Argentina had sent a naval task force to the region and Chilean President Gabriel Gonzales Videla is now on his way there in a naval transport.

Constitutionality Upheld

Extension of Rent Controls In Some Form Appears Sure

Post Reporter

Extension of rent control beyond the February 29 expiration date appeared certain yesterday as the Supreme Court ruled it was constitutional and both House and Senate committees moved for its continuation.

House and Senate committee action on rent control legislation were entirely different.

The Senate Banking and Currency Committee unanimously approved a 14-month rent control extension measure after killing provisions for a virtual blanket 15 per cent increase in rent and the decontrolling of many rental areas.

The House Banking and Currency Committee approved a 30-day extension of the present rent control law. Chairman Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.) said the committee wants more time to study the economic situation in view of recent price drops on the commodity market.

Neither House nor Senate action will affect the District of Columbia, which has a separate rent control law.

The Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of rent control laws in a rare unanimous decision delivered by Justice Douglas.

The court reversed a decision by Federal Judge Paul Jones in Cleveland that Congress cannot exercise its war powers to control rents when "in fact" the Nation is at peace.

The Senate committee's action on rent control will be reported to the Senate and placed on the calendar today. Both House and Senate, however, are under "gentle-

PEOPLE In The NEWS

Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.), who thinks the sovereignty of his State may be insulted if questioning continues on his cotton speculation, has had quite a bit to do with Oklahoma's sovereignty.

Thomas settled in Oklahoma in 1900, seven years before Oklahoma achieved her Statehood. He was a compromise candidate for the first State Senate and served there for 13 years before he resigned to run for the U. S. Congress.

Sen. Thomas

Now 71, Thomas earned his first dollar at 14 by selling the hide of a racoon. Born on a farm in Putnam County, Ind., he got a teaching license at 16 and after three terms in district school, entered Central Normal at Danville, Ind., where he paid his way by keeping books and operating a boarding club. Later, on a scholarship, he attended DePauw University.

Defeated in a Republican landslide when he first ran for Congress in 1920, Thomas was elected in 1922 to represent Oklahoma's sixth district, and in 1926 moved up to a Senate seat.

Thomas followed in the footsteps of William Jennings Bryan in the campaign of 1896 for "free silver," and since his advent to the Senate has continued his active interest in the metal.

Married to Miss Edith Smith of Corsicana, Tex., in 1902, Senator Thomas has one son, Wilford.

Mrs. Grace Llewellyn

Mrs. Grace Kanode Llewellyn, local Portia who hit the news again yesterday when her missing jewels were "found" or "returned," is no stranger to the local press.

Mrs. Llewellyn

Socialite daughter of Mrs. Albert H. Kanode in nearby Silver Spring, and a woman attorney admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court, she long has been a familiar on the local scene.

The high point in her career was reached when she served as a member of the prosecution staff at the trial in Tokyo of Japan's wartime Premier Hideki Tojo and 26 other Japanese accused of war crimes.

Mrs. Llewellyn was married in 1934 to Harry F. Vickers, a Detroit manufacturer, and subsequently divorced. She married Col. Paul Llewellyn of Upperville, Va., in 1939 and divorced him in 1943.

Mrs. Llewellyn, who was the niece of the late Melvin C. Hazen, one time D. C. Commissioner, worked for the State Department during World War I, later served as office manager for former Secretary of State Robert Lansing and as legal assistant to Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat.

George E. Strong

George E. Strong, named yesterday as peacemaker in the GSI cafeteria strike, brings to bear on the dispute three pertinent professions—those of soldier, lawyer and labor conciliator.

Strong

He has crowded all three, with success in each, in the 30 years since he first served in the Army as a pilot.

Now a colonel on inactive duty, he helped settle more than 100 strikes as commanding officer of the central district of the Air Service Command during World War II. Since his release from active duty, he has settled such tough disputes as the Pittsburgh power strike a year ago and the Birmingham electric power case last summer—acting in both for the Government.

He was born in Blue Rapids, Kans., 52 years ago, and came to Washington in 1918, when he served four years as secretary to his father, James G. Strong, a Congressman for 14 years.

Admitted to the District bar in 1921, he was a special assistant to the Attorney General until 1925. For the next 10 years he practiced law here, then was principal attorney and acting regional director for the Securities Exchange Commission for four years.

Called to active Army duty in 1940, his work for the Air Corps in labor-management relations extended from Pittsburgh to the Rockie and from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico. In 1946, he was chairman of the nonferrous metals fact-finding board.

He lives with two sons at 403 Wilson la., Bethesda, Md.

Aram Khachaturian

Aram Khachaturian, Russian composer currently being lauded and scorned by alternate Soviet powers, is a prolific composer at 45.

While he was still in Moscow's good books—back in 1942—he got the Stalin Prize of 100,000 rubles for his ballet Gayne. He also is the holder of the Order of Lenin.

Actually, however, many critics agree that his music is largely inspired by the folklore of his native Armenia, although his composition technique follows the Russian National School.

His first symphony was written to commemorate the fifteenth anniversary of Soviet Armenia. He later wrote "Poem for Stalin" and, during World War II, composed his second symphony, with its theme "the wrath of the Soviet people waging a struggle for humanity."

Apartment Tenants Protest Owner's Rent Rise Appeal

Tenants at Hampton Courts, 2013 New Hampshire ave. nw., yesterday protested a petition by the owners to boost rentals on the 118-unit apartment building by an estimated 17 per cent.

Many of the 95 tenants testified in opposition to the proposed rent hike at a hearing before Examiner Dennis K. Lane.

Aeneas Collins, a librarian, said his apartment has never been redecorated, the telephone service "is terrible" and from midnight on "elevator service is a hit and miss affair."

William McHenry, an accountant, testified that "a lot of windows you can't put either up or down; plumbing in general is bad."

Teddy Thanos, who runs a valet shop, told Lane the floor in his living room has a "sag" in it, and he had to redecorate the apartment himself.

Irving Yochelson, counsel for the owners, Hampton Courts, Inc., who purchased the building in February, 1947, reported that operating costs are up more than $8000 annually. He said that currently rents range from $28.50 for an "efficiency" apartment to $70.50 for a two-bedroom unit.

Yochelson contended "the tenants' views were a bit magnified." He said essential services have been "maintained quite well" although "redecorating has been done in a lesser amount" since the "tremendous advance in cost."

C. Louis Knight, counsel for the protesting tenants, claimed that the management was seeking "an increase of $3.52 in rentals for every $1 decrease in net income."

Help for U. S. Businessmen Abroad Studied

Chicago, Feb. 16 (NYHT).—John W. Snyder, Secretary of the Treasury, revealed here today that his office is studying the possibility of providing tax relief for Americans doing business abroad to stimulate foreign investments and thus possibly cut the cost of the Marshall Plan to the Federal Government.

As a second step, Snyder reported that arrangements are being made as a part of the Marshall Plan so that American capital invested in foreign countries can be reconverted into dollars if the venture is abandoned by its sponsors. In many foreign countries today, Americans are prohibited from liquidating their holdings and taking the proceeds in dollars back to this country.

In his address before the Chicago World Trade Conference, he said "There is no doubt that if we accorded special tax treatment to American income derived from a trade or business in foreign countries the flow of private American investment funds into foreign markets would be encouraged. It would assist in the development of backward areas, in the economic rehabilitation of wartorn countries and might reduce the cost of inter-governmental loans and assistance."

Flexibility Stressed

Again without mentioning the European Recovery Program, the Secretary of the Treasury told his audience that "in this period, public funds are necessary and desirable to meet temporary short-term requirements.

But public funds lacked the flexibility needed in long-range development and purpose. Clearly, this is a job for private capital, which is available on a much more flexible basis."

He acknowledged that conditions existing today in many foreign countries made such investments extremely risky and said that if adequate safeguards were not provided "private capital will stay at home where it can find a more prudent balance between profit and safety."

Sees Currencies Devalued

Discussing the international trade picture, Snyder said that virtually all European currencies "will have to be devalued in time, as we stabilize their economies." He refused to comment, however, on possible devaluation of the English pound.

Snyder also reiterated his opposition to a reduction in the Federal Government's income by cutting taxes now, saying that "the cold facts are that present economic conditions, budgetary considerations, inflationary pressures and debt management problems are such that we cannot deliberately allow revenues to drop below present levels."

men's agreement" not to act on controversial legislation before February 23.

This will leave only six days for final action before the February 29 expiration date of the present law.

It was disclosed yesterday that influential Republican leaders in the House feel the 30-day extention voted out by the House committee is insufficient and plan to suggest an amendment to push the extension up at least to 60 days.

Senator Harry Cain (R., Wash.) of the Senate Rent Control Subcommittee said one member of his committee would propose a 90-day extension of the rent control law if the House was adamant in rejecting the Senate bill.

On the House side Wolcott told reporters that his group will probably want to continue rent control in some form for at least a year after it has had more time to study the economic situation.

Senate Bill Provisions

The Senate bill would:

1. Continue rent control through April 30, 1949.

2. Continue their present ceilings at least through that date for tenants who have accepted "voluntary" 15 per cent increases.

3. Permit continuation of voluntary 15 per cent rent increases in return for leases extending through December 31, 1949. The tenant would be required to sign an agreement spelled out in the law stating that he knows he cannot be compelled to vacate his housing accommodation if he refuses to sign such a lease.

4. Change the name of the Office of Housing Expediter to the Office of Rent Control and that of Housing Expediter to Rent Control Administrator.

5. Decontrol housing units which were renting for $225 a month or more, furnished or unfurnished, 60 days before the law goes into effect.

Would Tighten Penalties

5. Widen the scope of the Rent Control Administrator's control over violations of the act. Penalties of $1000 and/or one year's imprisonment are established in the act for wilful violation of any provisions of it. The Rent Control Administrator may certify facts to the Attorney General. The present triple damage suit provision for tenants is retained.

6. Lift ceilings on rented rooms in private homes but maintain them on rooming houses.

7. Maintain veterans' benefits under the present law until May 1, 1949.

8. End a section of the present law giving the Housing Expediter authority to deny use of scarce building materials for recreation or amusement facilities.

Dispossession For Alterations

9. Allow landlords to dispossess tenants on 60 days notice if they desire to make such alterations, remodeling or conversions "as cannot practically be done with the tenant in occupancy." Landlords will not have to give 60 days notice to tenants who fail to pay rent or commit a "a nuisance."

The committee voted seven to six against the provision of the bill introduced by Cain which would have decontrolled housing areas with one or more per cent housing vacancies.

The committee voted eight to five against another Cain proposal to allow landslords whose costs have risen 30 per cent to impose a 15 per cent rent hike.

Supreme Court Ruling

In holding the rent control law constitutional in its derivation from the war powers, the Supreme Court said,

"Whatever may be the consequences when war is officially terminated, the war power does not necessarily end with the cessation of hostilities."

In concurring, Justice Jackson warned of the danger to a free government of too loose a use of war powers.

In this case, Justice Jackson declared:

"I think we can hardly deny that the war power is as valid a ground for Federal rent control now as it has been at any time. We still are technically in a state of war."

Ex-Merchant Mariner Sues U. S. for $50,000

James Farrell Crowley, 1673 Columbia rd. nw., yesterday filed suit in District Court against the United States, asking for $50,000 damages for injuries he received in February, 1946, aboard the steamer George W. Brown.

According to his attorney, John J. Carmody, he suffered frostbite to hands and feet and back injuries while serving in the Merchant Marine on a ship off the coast of Maine.

fusal to bargain until the union can win a National Labor Relations Board election and be certified by NLRB as collective bargaining agent. Local 471, representing GSI workers for 10 years, has been replaced, GSI argues, by the 1300 people newly hired by the corporation.

The union's obstacle to NLRB recognition is the failure of officers of the parent union, United Public Workers of America, to take the Taft-Hartley non-Communist oath. The union says it neither wants nor needs NLRB recognition and charges that GSI has raised the Communist issue merely as a union-busting device. Local union officers filed the non-Communist affidavits at Schwellenbach's suggestion 11 days ago, after Union President Richard A. Bancroft resigned.

GSI's board of trustees agreed to discuss the dispute with a conciliator at a meeting last Wednesday with Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman and other Government officials it was learned.

In two related developments yesterday, an executive board member of UPWA announced his resignation and a local of the union launched a drive to obtain the removal of UPWA President Abram Flaxer.

Both actions were in protest to Flaxer's alleged left-wing tendencies and to the board's failure to openly repudiate the third party movement. The resigned officer was John Davies of Detroit, home of the protesting local, No. 191.

Oil Relief Expected Soon In D. C. Area

Relief for this area's present fuel oil shortage is almost in sight, District Coordiator J. Thomas Kennedy declared late yesterday.

Plans are under way for a more steady supply of fuel, to end the uncertainty of the present day-to-day crisis, he said.

"We may be able to announce something more definite tomorrow," said Kennedy. "I think we're going to get over this immediate hump."

A Navy loan of 420,000 gallons of diesel oil reached here over the weekend, Kennedy said, and was allotted to L. P. Steuart & Bro., which supplies an etsimated 22 per cent of this area's homes.

Other fuel oil deliveries yesterday included 714,000 gallons of home-type oil, the balance of an 840,000-gallon allocation to this area by the Petroleum Regional Advisory Council on Friday.

Calls for emergency delivery of oil for hardship cases yesterday slackened off "quite a bit," in comparison to last week, said Kennedy, "and the warmer weather has cut down a little on the demand."

Defendant Out on Bail In Meyers Rape Case

Mineola, N. Y., Feb. 16 (AP).—A former Navy airman today was released in $2500 bail on a plea of innocent in an attempt to rape the actress wife of retired Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers.

The former airman, Warren H. Hofman, 23, of Bayville, was released last week from a hospital for the criminal insane. He has now been termed legally sane.

Retail Food Prices Holding To Level of Weekend Cuts

Retail food prices here yesterday generally held to levels set in weekend listings as an expected note of caution replaced last week's wave of price cutting.

While market-level cuts for a few commodities have started to trickle through to them, several wholesalers said, they forecast no major reductions in retail prices.

Lower prices to the housewife, which would normally follow these cuts, they pointed out, have already been made in anticipation of the reductions in wholesale listings.

"All of us are buying as cautiously as possible," said one wholesaler yesterday. "With the markets rebounding, as they did today, the next day's prices are anybody's guess."

Butter prices, which dropped sharply all last week on the New York Mercantile Exchange, lowering retail prices as much as 10 to 13 cents a pound here, climbed back as much as 2½ cents in New York yesterday, to 81½ cents for 93-score.

However, Henry T. Males, chairman of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association's wholesale butter and eggs division, said a return to $1 a pound prices is unlikely here.

"We are getting nearer to the heavy butter production season," he said. "The price is not likely to go very high now."

Pension Plans Would Cover All Workers

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Social Security Administration yesterday urged Congress to enact a comprehensive "all-risk" workers' insurance program.

At the same time, Representative Robert W. Kean (R., N. J.) offered a bill closely in line with some of the SSA proposals.

Kean's bill would bring under coverage of the Federal old-age and survivors insurance program virtually all the 20 million American workers not now included. The present program covers about 40 million.

"Would Cost Less in End"

The law proposed by Kean would not cover Federal employes and railroad workers, since they have their own insurance system, but would bring in domestic workers and farm hands. Kean argued that his proposal would ultimately cost the Government less money than the present arrangement.

G,Hetaoi shrd cmf vbg cmfw shr

Now, he pointed out, the Government spends millions matching State funds for direct aid to aged people not covered by the insurance program. These funds could gradually be withdrawn, he said, as citizens build up sizable credits under the social security system.

The bill proposes a levy of 1 per cent on the first $4200 of annual wages, instead of only on the first $3000 as at present. It would boost the minimum monthly retirement benefit from the present $10 to $20.

Asks Doubled Payments

The Social Security Administration's proposals, which also urged the doubling of minimum retirement payments, and a 1 per cent tax on the first $4800 of wages, were contained in its annual report. It was prepared by SSA Commissioner Arthur J. Altmeyer, and submitted to Congress by Federal Security Agency Administrator Oscar R. Ewing.

The SSA report suggested that insurance be provided for wage loss in periods of disability, both temporary and permanent, and for the costs of medical care. This would include payments to doctors and hospitals, with free choice of doctor and hospital.

It further proposed coverage of all gainful workers, including farm and domestic workers, public employes, members of the armed forces, self-employed, and workers in nonprofit organizations. None are presently included in the old-age and survivors' insurance program.

For State Standardization

Benefit amounts would be increased, particularly to low-paid workers, and women should be able to qualify for benefits at 60 years of age rather than the present 65, the report said.

In the field of unemployment benefits, the recommendation was for standardization among States. The figures proposed were a minimum of $25 a week for at least 26 weeks' duration.

Cash benefits, the report urged, should be paid to insured workers and their dependents for both temporary (less than six months) and extended disability. At present the only such general payments are under the workmen's compensation laws, covering only accidents or diseases resulting from the victim's injury while on the job.

The comprehensive system which the report recommended "would have the simplicity and economy available through the use of a single set of records, a single contribution and a single set of local officers to administer all types of cash benefits," Altmeyer wrote.

The report referred to the scale of benefits under the old-age and survivors insurance program as "inadequate, even as compared with what was intended when it was adopted in 1939" because, among other things, the cost of living had risen 60 per cent since the benefit formula now in use was written into the Social Security Act.

After Divorce Suits Were Dismissed

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

MOTHER GETS CHILDREN—The scene above took place in the District Court pressroom yesterday, after Federal Judge Matthew McGuire had dismissed mutual divorce suits sought by Robert C. Hood, Washington photographer, and his wife, Mrs. Gloria Hood. Mrs. Hood had consented to pose with the children, Robert, 2, and Gloria, 3. Then Hood took the children in his arms, and reminded his wife that although she had been granted custody of them, he had a right to see them, too. Words followed, and finally Mrs. Hood took possession of the children

Flood Feared In Ohio; Other Rivers Down

Chicago, Feb. 16 (U.P.).—Snow-melting weather increased flood threads today along the Ohio River.

Several families on the Ohio near Cincinnati and at Point Pleasant, W. VVa., fled their homes with a flood stage of 52 feet expected at 7 a. m. tomorrow, but little damage was anticipated.

Rain-swollen rivers in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi receded. Residents in the stricken areas began cleaning up debris.

Hundreds still were homeless in Tennessee, but most of the waters were falling.

(The Tennessee Valley Authority labelled as "wholly inaccurate" a statement in an Associated Press dispatch, appearing on Sunday, that the floods were "too much" for the TVA dams and that waters had to be released, thereby flooding the country.

(The contrary was the case, according to C. E. Blee, TVA's chief engineer. He said none of the storage reservoirs of the system filled or "even came remotely near filling." The control system function as planned, Blee declared, and at no time was the release of water out of control. The result, he continued, was the averting of millions of dollars of flood damage.)

U. S. Secret Plans For Plane Engine Feared Stolen

North Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 16 (U.P.).—Secret plans and engineering data on a new gas turbine engine used by the armed forces in guided missile and rocket operations were feared stolen today from an engineering firm's offices.

Files were searched, John Hawkins, head of John Hawkins Associates, reported. He said he had "been approached by representatives of foreign governments" offering to buy information on his experiments.

Hood Divorce Suits Dismissed; Court Denounces Both Parties

District Court Justice Matthew F. McGuire yesterday threw out the limited divorce suits of photographer Robert C. Hood and his wife. Custody of their two children was given to Mrs. Hood.

After denouncing both parties, McGuire ordered Hood to pay $65 a week to support his wife, Gloria, 23, and the children, Gloria, 3½, and Robert, jr., 2½. He decreed also that Hood may have custody of the children from time to time.

"This case is the case of the pot calling the kettle black," McGuire declared. "I am compelled by the law of nature and God to turn the children over to their mother's custody, ill adapted as she is for that responsibility."

Hood, who owns a photograph studio at 2647 Connecticut ave. nw., filed his suit last October 24, charging cruelty. He said Mrs. Hood frequently threw things at him and once crushed a burning cigarette on his chest because he wouldn't surrender the negative of a picture.

Mrs. Hood filed her suit January 14, hurling countercharges of cruelty. She said that on some mornings Hood would get her out of bed by yanking her onto the floor by her legs.

Justice McGuire, after seeing the children in another room down the court corridor, told the Hoods:

"It is inconceivable to me how two people can bring such children into this world and then get themselves into such a mess.

"The parents should be ashamed to bring such a case into this court. This case shows the evils of divorce. It is from such cases that children, lacking the permanence of a home and parental love, turn to juvenile delinquency."

Fowler Sets Food Watch At Gallinger

A constant watch on the honesty of Gallinger Hospital employes responsible for food service will be maintained by the District Budget Office.

Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler said yesterday that an inspection last month showed 300 meals a day were going astray at the hospital. He said this loss, which amounted to about $10,000 a year to the District government, was based on the amount of food delivered to the hospital as compared with the number of patients on the rolls.

A similar check of the hospital's food bills and its patient occupancy will be made monthly, Fowler said, until the pilfering is halted. Fowler said in some cases food was not actually taken from the institution, but was consumed by persons other than patients. He said either action constituted theft.

Earth's Heat New Tool for Prospecting

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—The earth's heat underground is the latest tool for prospecting for oil and minerals.

This discovery was described at the annual meeting of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers here today by Dr. Hans Lundberg of Canada.

Heat rises as miners go deeper. But the signs for oil and metals are contained in small differences, of maybe three or four degrees Fahrenheit.

These differences show up within a few hundred feet of various underground formations. The formations may be salt domes containing oil, or rocks holding metals.

In Wood County, Tex., the heat over a salt dome was nearly four degrees Fahrenheit more than at other similar depths. This extra heat was detected by burying coils of wire 100 feet down. An electric current was sent into the coils. The resistance to this current dropped because of the four-degree rise.

Baruch Calls Peace Key to Price Problem

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—Bernard Baruch told a gathering of the Nation's mayors today that the problem of high prices can be solved only when genuine peace is achieved.

Addressing the United States Conference of Mayors, the financier and adviser to many Presidents asserted:

"The problem of high prices can only be solved in Washington. You know we are not at peace. Until we have peace, the ordinary laws of supply and demand and private initiative cannot function normally."

Follows Truman Message

Baruch's statement followed a message by President Truman which declared that unless high prices were permanently checked the living standards of millions of families "will be critically endangered."

Former OPA Administrator Chester Bowles proposed an extensive Federal program which he said "can modify, to a major extent, the recession which our past mistakes have made inevitable."

"During the last few weeks," he said, "we have all witnessed what may be the beginning of the second cycle of the old dismal cycle of economic boom and bust.

"There is one fact that we must all face squarely: We could not possibly expect that our economy could be subjected to the wholly unnecessary inflation of the last year and a half without eventually paying the piper.

"Sometime in the not too distant future—if it has not already started—we will find ourselves moving into a depression of some sort.

"When it comes," he said, "Congress and the Administration must take strong leadership if we are to keep it from deteriorating into a serious economic collapse."

Would Reduce Taxes

Bowles outlined his program as follows:

1. "Tax cuts all along the line . . . the time to cut taxes is when purchasing power is beginning to dry up.

2. "An all-out program of slum clearance and housing," building 1,400,000 homes a year.

3. Continue rent controls "for at least another year or two."

4. Broaden social security payments to include self-employed domestic help and farm workers.

Backs Health Insurance

5. Enact a national health insurance plan.

6. "Once a recession begins, we should move ahead promptly with our plans for the development of the Missouri Valley Authority, St. Lawrence Valley Authority, and for similar developments on the other major rivers."

7. "An all-out program for the building of schools . . . We should extend the principle of our GI Bill of Rights to enable all of our young people who are intellectually qualified to go to college."

8. Increase minimum wages from 40 to at least 75 cents an hour.

9. "Pass the European Recovery Program without crippling amendments as rapidly as possible."

600 Zionist Leaders Lobby For U. N. Policing of Palestine

American Zionist leaders lobbied here yesterday for United States sponsorship of a United Nations Security Council drive to establish a Jewish militia and an international police force in the Holy land.

The appeals were made personally to Congressmen by some 600 of 800 Zionist officials from some 250 cities at end of their two-day emergency council here.

They also urged immediate modification of the American embargo on arms to the Middle East and action of the U. N. Security Council against nations defying the U. N. (partition) resolutino on Palestine, especially deploring its "sabotage" by the British government.

All points were embodied in resolutions formally adopted at the meeting of the American Zionist Emergency Council. The Zionists leaders also charged the Government had "failed to act in the face of this grave situation" and had even "contributed to its deterioration."

They called on United States to "reassert its initiative in the United Nations and to take action to vindicate the integrity of American policy."

In asking modification of the arms embargo, the council resolution declared such restrictions should be eased "to insure an unimpeded flow of arms to the Jewish defense forces in Palestine for the purpose of defending attacked Palestine Jewry, which is upholding the U. N. resolution."

The council repeated its oft-stated charges that the British Government has not only failed to maintain public order in Palestine but is using its control powers "to encourage lawlessness on the part of Arab extremists, to permit the invasion of Palestine by armed Arab bands from neighboring countries, and to disarm and otherwise prevent effective defense by the Jewish defense forces in the country."

'Cinderella's' Dad Works in Mine and ruthless destruction intended to render people homeless and drive them from the soil; to force them into overcrowded urban centers where they become charges of an already overburdened state, and to create for them conditions of misery and hardship in the hope that this will make them susceptible to political agitation."

He estimated the guerillas' numbers at 20,000, and the number of refugees driven from their farms and villages at 420,000.

The continued military strife and the flood of refugees, he said, had caused much of the Greek budget and of American aid to be spent nonproductively.

Yet the President's letter and the accompanying report found some encouragement in the Greek picture.

"Greece is still a free country," the President reminded Congress. "The recent announcement of a 'government' by the Communist guerillas, who do not effetcively control territory in which to exercise any of the functions of government, appears to have been an act of desperation and not of strength.

"The transparent device of declaring the 'free government' has not materially changed the existing situation, except to reveal more clearly to the Greeks and to the world the true nature of Greece's enemy."

The report praised the Greek army for its "valorous" defeat of the guerillas at Konitsa in December, and said American aid was already adding to the effectiveness of the Greek forces. It predicted that all the American military advisers—90 officers and 80 enlisted men—would be at their posts in Greece by the end of this month.

Funds earmarked for American naval aid, amounting at present to $12,850,000, would help check the guerillas, the report explained, since "experience has shown that guerillas move largely by small craft, particularly fishing boats, to form new units in various parts of the country and to supply such units."

The report said the Greek government was trying to install a centralized budget, to help check inflation. It pointed to the repairing of highways, the reclaiming of farmland and the clearing of the Corinth Canal as signs that the American aid mission was doing its job.

It found farm prospects encouraging, with a cereal crop expected to be 85 per cent of the prewar figure.

ready be locked in internecine war. Strife will be worse when the commission tries to take over May 15.

Arab morale is steadily rising, both through local Arab successes and through the steady reinforcement of well armed bands filtering into Palestine from adjacent Arab countries.

The commission said that without an international force in Palestine, Jerusalem could not be established as an internationalized place.

"The United Nations would be dealt a severe blow if its efforts to maintain the sacred character of the city and to preserve it as a possible center of peace and harmony should end in a sanguinary struggle between religious communities," the report said.

President Appeals

President Truman has made personal appeals to some Arab leaders to use "restraint" in dealing with the Palestine controversy, the White House disclosed yesterday.

The appeals were believed directed by letter to the heads of all seven member nations of the Arab League.

Charles G. Ross, presidential secretary, said they were "confidential communications" which would not be made public. One letter, it was learned, went to King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia.

Representative Charles A. Buckley, (D., N. Y.) introduced a resolution which would place Congress on record as favoring shipment of arms and ammunition to the Jews. He said this could be done by lifting the embargo applying to the Middle East.

Iraq Minister Says U. S. Should Make Move

Baghdad, Iraq, Feb. 16 (AP).—The Council of Ministers considered today an appeal from President Truman that Iraq use its influence to calm the situation in Palestine.

Minister of Education Mohamed Ridha Al Shabibi told a reporter the United States Government "should from her side exert an effort to calm the situation in the Middle East areas."

"Being a member of the United Nations, and before asking other states to calm the Palestine situation, the American Government should adopt a really neutral attitude toward Arab issues, and toward implementation of the Palestine partition, at least," he said.

30 Arabs Are Killed In Palestine Attack

Jerusalem, Feb. 16 (AP).—Official sources said tonight 30 Arabs were killed in an attack today on the Jewish settlement of Tirat Zvi in northern Palestine.

The assailants were engaged by British military units and members of the colony. Jewish casualties were put at one killed, two injured.

In Tel Aviv, a spokesman for Hagana, the Jewish defense army, claimed 60 Arabs were killed. He said 35 were slain before the British arrived to aid in repulsing the attack.

resented by the special delegate of the United States Government, Allan Dulles, the brother of John Foster Dulles, who figures under the pseudonym of 'Bull' and who had direct instructions and authority from the White House."

Russia said Dulles' opposite number was Prince Max Hohenlohe, a man closely connected with the ruling circles of Nazi Germany, who acted as Hitler's representative under the assumed name of 'Pauls.'

[The United Press reported Dulles denied the charges.

["It's all nonesense," he said. "I wrote a book called 'Germany's Underground' which described my dealings with the Germans during the war, but those dealings were with anti-Hitler Germans—the Anti-Hitler underground."]

Dulles, former chief of the United States Army office of strategic services in Europe, worked with the German underground against Hitler from 1942 on, following a State Department career which began in 1916.

(He helped prepare the case against the Nazis at Nuernberg after arranging for surrender of the German armies in Italy.

(From 1938 on, Dulles said in his book, plot after plot was prepared both for coup d'etats and assassinations of Hitler. He reported that allied refusal to cooperate handicapped the plotters.

("Both Washington and London were fully advised beforehand on all the conspirators were attempting to do," Dulles said. "But it sometimes seemed that those who determined policy in America and England were making the military task as difficult as possible by uniting all Germans to resist to the bitter end.")

Asserting that documents containing a summary of these negotiations belonged to Germany's security service, the Russian statement added:

"It is evident from these documents the conversations touched on important questions concerning Austria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Romania, Hungary—and this is particularly important—the question of conclusion of peace with Germany."

Prices Rise Again On U. S. Exchanges

Grain, Cattle, Cotton, Butter, Stocks Show Sharp Advances in Day's Trading

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Prices of almost everything dealt in on the Nation's exchanges went up yesterday. These included grain, cattle, hogs, cotton, butter and New York stocks.

Corn contracts for May and July deliveries, and soybeans, ranged up to the permissible limit of 8 cents a bushel. Wheat closed 3¾ to 5¾ cents higher, oats from 1 to 4¾. Lard jumped almost a cent a pound.

Hogs were up from 50 cents to $1 a hundred pounds. Cattle were steady to $1 higher.

Wholesale butter was up 3 cents a pound in Chicago and 2½ cents in New York.

New York stocks also were strong, although volume was small.

On Capitol Hill, House and Senate committees investigating speculation in commodities were engaged in rows over procedure. The day's events included:

1. Senate investigators unanimously agreed that Edwin T. Maynard, veteran Chicago speculator, had cleaned up $300,000 in the recent break in grain prices, without any inside information.

An appropriations subcommittee, headed by Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) questioned Maynard behind closed doors for several hours. At the end, Ferguson said he agreed with Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, who last week said that Maynard's profits were the result of his own shrewd trading and not due to any exclusive information.

2. Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.), a member of Ferguson's committee, and only member of Congress who has admitted speculation in commodities, blasted the committee's investigation of his dealings. He said the committee had singled him out unfairly, to pry into his "private household closet."

"Any further interference with the business of my Senate office," Thomas warned, would be considered "an insult to the sovereign State of Oklahoma."

Anderson Smacks Down

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson twice smacked down Chairman August H. Andresen (R., Minn.) of the House Speculation Committee.

Anderson refused a request from Andresen for "the names and addresses of all persons trading in the commodities market in wheat, oats, corn, lard and cottonseed oil between January 19 and February 11."

Shortly afterward, Anderson sent another bristling letter to Andresen, complaining that Andresen was asking a lot of useless information from brokers.

On February 5 Andresen asked Anderson for a report from each of the Nation's 600 brokers, the names and addresses of every customer on their books "known or believed to be aliens."

The next day Andresen asked each broker directly for a similar report. The result, Anderson complained, is that "legitimate business concerns" are being subjected "to the necessity of furnishing in duplicate vast quantities of information which, so far as we can observe, is for purposes entirely outside of the Commodity Exchange Act."

"Andresen's committee was formed to investigate speculation by Government employes or officials who might be able to profit by inside information," an Agriculture spokesman said last night.

"Instead, Andresen is prying into the affairs of citizens of foreign countries who are investing in American markets.

"He probably would be the first to complain if the British or French governments, or if Cuban, Mexican or other South American authorities, demanded to know all about the personal affairs of private American citizens in their countries."

Information Refused

Anderson told Andresen that he would not furnish the information about aliens, inasmuch as Andresen had undertaken to get it direct from the brokers.

Andresen's request for a record of every transaction on every exchange for 21 days—from January 19 to February 11—was refused by Anderson on the ground that it was (1) too much for the Commodity Exchange Authority; (2) too much work to ask of the Nation's brokers, and (3) unfair to "thousands of small traders who have committed no legal wrong."

"I think you might like to know," Anderson wrote, "that the survey job called for by your most recent request is about ten times as large and costly as any survey ever conducted by the Commodity Exchange Authority.

One major part of the job and cost lies in obtaining the names and addresses of thousands of small traders scattered throughout the United States.

"It would impose a stupendous task upon the brokerage firms just to transcribe from their records the data called for."

Anderson suggested that Andresen be content with the regular reports made by brokers to the CEA of all transactions by individuals amounting to more than 200,000 bushels of grains or their equivalents.

Committee Eases Up

Ferguson's treatment of Maynard, the Chicago plunger, indicated the committee may be mellowing its treatment toward witnesses.

After determining that Maynard had not done anything illegal or unethical, the committee decided not to parade his evidence in public.

Maynard was revealed to have told the Senators that he started selling short in wheat, cotton and oats futures on February 4, the day the big break began.

Among various signs that led him to believe a price decline was imminent, he listed the French currency devaluation and improved world prospects for wheat.

Senator Thomas' blast at the committee was contained in a letter to Ferguson. Thomas, who already has furnished the committee with an accounting of his own and his wife's commodity speculations, repeated his claim that all the trading was legitimate.

"After vast expenditures of public funds, and with much publicity, when you pulled aside the curtain of my private household closet, all you found was some few bales of cotton and some oats. both products of the farms of Oklahoma," he wrote.

"Many citizens, no doubt, will wonder what might be found if the private household closets of other Senators might likewise be opened."

Challenge by Thomas

Thomas then challenged the committee to back a change in Senate rules, which would require:

1. That every Senator file a complete record of his wealth and his sources of income.

2. That each be required to supply the Senate with annual copies of his income tax return.

He then added:

"If either myself or any of my assistants are bothered further about this or any other similar matter pertaining to private activities which are legal, then I shall consider such activity an unjustified and unwarranted attack upon myself and my assistants."

Ferguson's only comment was that he did not know he "had been rummaging in Senator Thomas' closet." He made it plain, however, that the subcommittee had not finished its study of Thomas' trading. He said it would go ahead with public hearings if the evidence seems to warrant them, in spite of Thomas' assertion that he would spurn any committee subpena.

Senators' Business

In his letter Thomas remarked that he did not believe his private affairs were of any more concern to the public than the private business activities in which other Senators are engaged.

For example, he added, "the Chrysler Airtemp Conditioning units, the Oakland Tribune, and the Burley Bulletin."

Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.), a member of the subcommittee, is assistant publisher of the Oakland Tribune. Another member, Henry C. Dworshak (R., Idaho) formerly published the Burley, Idaho, Bulletin.

Ferguson said his son-in-law operates a local sales agency for Chrysler Airtemp units in Michigan. He added that he had no financial interest in it.

House Told Of Tax Case Against Long

By The Associated Press

Representative Dirksen (R., Ill.) told the House yesterday an income tax case "involving fraud" is pending in the Internal Revenue Bureau against Earl K. Long, candidate for Governor of Louisiana.

He said he made this statement on the basis of a recent appearance of Internal Revenue Commissioner George J. Schoeneman before an appropriate subcommittee.

Long Former GGovernor

Long is one of two candidates in a Democratic runoff primary February 24. He is a brother of tthe late Huey P. Long and a former lieutenant governor and governor of Louisiana.

Before Dirksen spoke, Representative Hebert (D., La.) told the House, "I deny categorically" a statement by Representative Domengeaux (D., La.) that Long evaded his income tax for 1938 and 1939, and that the Internal Revenue Bureau had assessed against him a "tax liability including penalty in excess of $100,000."

After Domengeaux made his statement to the House last January 15, Long sued him for libel.

Suit Referred To

Dirksen referred to this suit. He asked support for his resolution to have the Speaker appoint a committee to investigate "possible fraudulent tax returns" at New Orleans.

Dirksen said this was the only way Domengeaux could obtain Long's tax record to use as a defense, and that "truth is a defense in a libel action."

Dirksen said, on the basis of Schoneman's apearance before the subcommittee, he could say "an income tax case is pending against Earl Long in the Revenue Department," that the case 'involves a substantial amount of money—a very substantial amount," that the case has been pending "for some time" and that "the case involves fraud."

CIO Official Seized by U. S. As Communist

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—The ustice Department's drive to deport aliens accused of Communist activity snared a top official of the CIO National Maritime Union today.

Ferdinand Christafer Smith, 54, NMU national Secretary, and one of the founders of the militant Seamen's Union, was arrested at his home, and taken to Ellis Island to await a hearing on the deportation warrant.

Smith, born in Jamaica, also is a member of the CIO national executive board.

The Justice Department said Smith is a "long-time member" of the Communist Party. The deportation warrant charged the NMU secretary was a member of an organization advocating violent overthrow of the United States Government at the time of his entry into the country at New Orleans in 1919.

Fourth Rounded Up

Smith was the fourth New York City resident rounded up on similar warrants in the last few weeks.

John Williamson, labor secretary of the American Communist Party, was arrested Tuesday. Claudie Jones, a writer, and Alexander Bittelman, both members of the Communist Party national committee, were taken into custody in January.

Held at Ellis Island with Williamson and Smith is Gerhart Eisler, described by a House committee as the Nation's top Communist.

The Justice Department said last week five deportation orders have been issued recently against persons accused of "Communist activity in this country."

A dozen similar cases are pending, including those of Eisler. Bittelman, Miss Jones, Williamson and Smith.

Other Cases Pending

Hanns Eisler, Hollywood composer and brother of Gerhart, was ordered deported last week, as an alien Communist. He agreed to leave the country for France soon. The Justice Department was advised today by the composer's attorneys that the departure would be delayed because Mrs. Eisler is suffering from an ear infection. The couple now expects to leave March 2.

City Councilman Michael Quill, president of the Greater New York CIO Council, wired a protest to Attorney General Tom Clark against Smith's arrest.

The telegram described the NMU official as "one of the nation's outstanding labor leaders" and a "leader of the Negro people and a vigorous champion of the rights of minority groups."

CIOMan's Perjury Trial Opens

Trial of Harold R. Christoffel, Milwaukee leader and alleged Communist on six counts of perjury, got under way yesterday in District Court before udge Edward M. Curran.

A jury of eight men and four women was selected within an hour after the court convened and the remainder of the hearing was devoted to prosecuting attorney John S. Pratt's opening statement.

Pratt said the Government will produce documentary evidence to show Christoffel had perjured himself, and will also prove he was a member of the Communist Party and of the Communist Political Association.

Christoffel testified before the House Committee on Education and Labor last March, when it was investigating charges that labor unions, and particularly Local 248 of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) and the Milwaukee County Industrial Union Council, were dominated by Communist influences.

Pratt told the court Christoffel was active in Milwaukee union affairs, was president of Local 248, which represents workers at the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., and has been president of the Milwaukee Industrial Union Council.

The statements on which Christoffel faces perjury charges arising out of his congressional testimony, March 1, 1947, are:

That he was not then or had ever been a member of the Communist Party; that he never was a member of the Communist Political Association; that he had never worked with the Communist Party or the Communist Political Association; that he had never participated in activities of the Communist Party; that he h. never supported Communists or indorsed communism, and that he did not know Ned Sparks and Fred Blair, who allegedly are known Communists and officers of the Communist Party in Wisconsin.

Defense counsel is D. I. Sobel and John Rogge, former Assistant Attorney General.

Report Urges Scarce Goods Powers Stand

The Government's remaining powers to allocate and set aside scarce materials should be renewed at once, to facilitate the Marshall Plan a Congressional report recommended yesterday.

The report, a staff study of the House Select (Herter) Committee on Foreign Aid, warned of the dangers if the powers were allowed to lapse. They are contained in the Second Decontrol Act, which is scheduled to expire on February 29.

Yesterday, however, the House Banking Committee approved a bill to extend the Act by 30 days. Today, the Senate Banking Committee meets on the question, with the probability that it will propose extension, perhaps with some modifications, of the present law for a longer period.

Most Powers Used Sparingly

The act gives the Department of Commerce power to establish priorities and allocations for tin and tin products; import controls over fats, oil, rice and other materials to increase production abroad of goods needed here and over materials needed to carry out export programs.

Most of these powers, the staff report noted, have been used sparingly, but in the future they may have to be brought into operation on a wider scale. Even so, the report said, the authority should be extended. In particular, it noted, it is necessary to carry out the comprehensive foreign aid plan which is now emerging.

Would Not Seem Wise

"The strip the Administration of means necessary to the purpose that the Congress has approved . . . would not seem wise," the document said.

Turning to consideration of another set of Administration controls—the Commerce Department authority to grant export licenses—the report commented at length on the desirability of moving them to the proposed new foreign aid agency.

Under the Administration plan, the export control powers would remain with the Commerce Department, even after the new foreign aid agency was established.

But the Herter study declared that if a new agency is set up, "most of the present facilities . . . for programing, screening and licensing of exports," should be shifted to it.

"Administrative facilities should go with power and responsibility," it declared.

Yank Freed in Baby's Death

Trowbridge, England, Feb. 16 (AP). A former American soldier from Indianapolis won freedom today from charges that he murdered his infant daughter.

Billy Burke Edwards, 24, who married a British girl and settled here, admitted hitting 8-month-old Brenda and carting her body off into the woods. The coroner's jury said there was "insufficient evidence to show how she met her death."

The prosecutor said the death "may have had nothing to do with the blow. I submit that there is not sufficient evidence as it stands to justify the charge continuing. Over and over again he (Edwards) has said he never intended to murder the child."

One of Edwards' lawyers was James Dawson, Indianapolis attorney, who came to Trowbridge with money raised by "friends and neighbors" in Indianapolis. Dawson said he hoped to get "Billy back to America as soon as possible so that he can get into a war veteran's hospital for treatment."

When charged Edwards told police:

"I go a bit insane, I guess, at times. What causes it I don't know. I have been handicapped because of my wounds. My wounds are in the chest and I wonder sometimes if they affect my head. I do things sometimes and I don't know what.

"It must have been like that when I did it to little Brenda, I guess. She was always crying and I did not know what to odo for her. I just got a little wild and I hit her with my hand. Then I came too my senses."

Printers Fight Injunction Bid

Indianapolis, Feb. 16 (AP).— Failure of the government to go to court last November should cost it the opportunity to seek an injunction now, the AFL International Typographical Union contended today.

The charge was contained in an answer filed in Federal Court here to show cause why that court should not issue an injunction against the printers. The ITU pointed out that newspapers complained to the National Labor Relations Board last September that the printers were violating the Taft-Hartley Act.

The NLRB filed a formal complaint against the union last November 21, and an aide of Robert N. Denham, NLRB general counsel, asked the injunction January 16, to prevent alleged unfair labor practices until the board can decide the case. In support of its contention that Denham and his assistants moved tardily, the union brief said:

"Their failure to apply for temporary injunctive relief on or immediately after November 21, 1947, precludes their application for such relief at this time."

The ITU further set out that the provision of the law under which the NLRB sought the injunction "expressly provides that the power must be exercised on the issuance of the complaint."

Nearly a dozen other legal documents — most of them memoranda from briefs from "friends of the court"—were filed today.

The American Federation of Labor, supporting the ITU's motion to dismiss the NLRB petition for an injunction, assailed the section of the law under which the injunction is sought as "an unconstitutional subversion of judicial power."

On the other side of the argument, the American Newspaper Publishers Association charged that "with each passing week the extent of the respondent's (ITU) violation of law increases."

The Southern Newspaper Publishers Association and the Inland Daily Press Association submitted briefs arguing against dismissal of the petition.

The International Association of Machinists, which said it represented "in excess of 600,000 workers," said "the liberties and rights of these employes are at stake." It urged that "the motion to dismiss be granted."

John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers said the Taft-Hartley Act's court order provisions are invalid and represent an attempted return to "government by injunction." The brief added that the precedent of an injunction against the ITU would place an "ominous threat" over the coal industry.

The Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 also submitted a brief in support of the ITU's contentions.

Inquest Charges Man With Death Of Wife by Burning

A housewife's shout for mercy immediately before she was fatally burned was held against her husband yesterday when a coroner's jury held him responsible for her death.

The jury directed that James H. Shaw, 39, of 317 K st. nw., be held without bail for grand jury action in the death by burning of his wife, Louise, 30.

Witnesses testified they heard her scream out, "Stop! You're killing me," during a domestic quarrel that preceded the fire above the recently closed Crystal Grill, 4th and K sts. nw., last Wednesday. Mrs. Shaw died Friday in Emergency Hospital from burns suffered in the blaze.

Police said the fire started when a coal stove was upset during the quarrel. It burned out six bedrooms, trapping Mrs. Shaw in one till she was pulled out, critically burned, by firemen.

To get real relief you must increase the flow of this vital gastric juice. Medical authorities, in independent laboratory tests on human stomachs, have by positive proof shown that 888 Tonic is amazingly effective in increasing this flow when it is too little or scanty due to a non-organic stomach disturbance. This is due to the 888 Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Rents And Prices

Monday's congressional committee action on an extension of rent control makes it unlikely that the law will be allowed to lapse in the manner of OPA. Happily, there seems to be a general disposition in Congress to continue Federal rent ceilings in one form or another for at least another year. Thus the matter probably will not cause great partisan controversy. Nonetheless, the sad experience of OPA ought to be a constant reminder of the danger in delaying definite action until the last minute.

In lieu of a full-dress extension at this time, the measure approved by the House Banking and Currency Committee at the instance of Chairman Wolcott would prolong the present law one month after the February 29 expiration date to give legislators an opportunity to study the effects of recent commodity price declines. The temporary extension put forward in the House would avoid the inequities of a blanket rent increase and the freeing of large areas from controls. But it would only postpone the day when Congress would have to come to grips with the problem. For it is hard to see how the minor recession in the price level can have any appreciable bearing on the demand for housing. The cause of the housing shortage is simply too few dwellings. And the only way that the shortage will be met, regardless of whether the general price structure is stabilized, is through large-scale construction made possible by such means as the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill.

No one can reasonably object to a provision in whatever rent control law is adopted to give landlords relief when their costs have gone up. But the way to do this is not through a blanket rent increase that would give many landlords an unwarranted legacy at the expense of tenants, but rather through a procedure whereby any boosts in rent would be conditioned on, and proportionate to, the actual demonstrable increase in landlords' costs. We hope that in the effort to be fair to landlords Congress will eschew measures that would be unfair to tenants and will concentrate instead on streamlining the machinery for rent adjustment appeals.

Mordecai Brown

Mordecai Brown, another of those half-legendary figures of the classical age of baseball, is dead at the age of 71 in his native Indiana, and men who were boys in the days of his greatness may have occasion to meditate upon the evanescence of earthly glory. Mordecai Brown's glory was ended before the advent of the millionaire entrepreneurs, the great steel and concrete stadia, the eight-page sports sections, and the fat players' contracts. Thus the man who for six successive seasons won between 20 and 30 games for his club, and spent his final years in the respectable but modest estate of a filling station proprietor, is dead.

Like so many of his great contemporaries, Mordecai Brown was a farm boy. Early in his life he lost half of his index finger in an accident with a corn shredder. By constant practice he had turned this handicap into an asset and could do with three remaining fingers what few pitchers before or since his time have been able to do with four. He could make the ball behave precisely as he wished it to behave, which was usually in a way contrary to the batter's expectation. He was one of the finest of all fielding pitchers, a better infielder perhaps than either Tinker or Evers or Chance, that trio of his colleagues of the Chicago Cubs whose names have become proverbial. In 1908 when he won 29 games he went through the season without a single error. It was in that season that he vanquished his illustrious rival Christy Mathewson in the historic play-off game at the Polo Grounds, which had grown out of the Evers-Merkle incident, involving one of the more obscure rules of base-running. All in all Mordecai Brown helped to pitch his club into four league championships.

Considering his record, it is difficult to understand why Mordecai Brown, though he has been several times proposed as a candidate, has not been admitted to the baseball pantheon, which already includes at least one or two who were certainly his technical inferiors. Perhaps the explanation is that he was largely lacking in those amiable eccentricities which somehow remain in the memory after purely professional exploits have been forgotten.

Clearing Away Doubts

The legislative counsel of the House has substantially buttressed the claim of sponsors of the Auchincloss-Ball bill that it meets all the requirements of the Constitution. Most of the data in the legislative counsel's report had previously been cited by five Washington lawyers. But it is good to have the essential points reiterated by a group of disinterested experts serving Congress itself.

In both memoranda the basic point is that the proposed District Council may be as readily endowed with legislative powers as a territorial legislature. The Supreme Court has repeatedly upheld acts authorizing territorial legislatures to pass laws similar to those enacted by the States. Both the Territories and the District are under the exclusive and absolute control of Congress subject only to the limitations to be found in the Constitution itself. In the Binns case the Supreme Court said: "In the District of Columbia it (Congress) has adopted a different mode of government, and in Alaska still another. It may legislate directly in respect to the local affairs of a Territory or transfer the power of such legislation to a legislature elected by the citizens of the Territory." This is wholly in accord with the view of Madison, the father of the Constitution, who said in referring to residents of the District: "A municipal legislature for local purposes, derived from their own suffrages, will of course be allowed them."

The Supreme Court has never contradicted this view. True, it upset a licensing act of the territorial government existing in the District from 1871 to 1874, but this was on the ground that Congress had not granted the power which the local authorities sought to exercise. The District Court (then the Supreme Court of the District) also held that Congress could not delegate to the old legislative assembly authority to make laws of general concern. In the light of the Supreme Court's many rulings to the contrary with respect to the granting of power to territorial legislatures, however, this lower court ruling certainly cannot be regarded as controlling.

Corporation Counsel West's chief objection to the power-granting section of the Auchincloss-Ball bill is based on the assumption that it would put Congress in the position of enacting District laws laid before it by the District Council through the negative process of failing to raise objection. Positive action by Congress is essential, he contended, to the making of law. But if Congress can assign an area of local law-making to a District Council, as it has repeatedly done in the case of territorial legislatures, then no action, either negative or positive, is necessary to give effect to measures properly passed by the council. The veto provided in the bill is merely an extra check on the council—a check that could be exercised by the House, the Senate or the President. This view seems to us eminently reasonable, and, considering the weight of authority behind it, Congress may well accept the home-rule bill without further concern as to its constitutionality.

Valedictory

Preparedness for peace as well as for war is the theme of General Eisenhower's last report as Chief of Staff. With all he has to say about a short-term program of armed defense we heartily agree. If, God forbid, there is another war, there will no longer be breathing space to enable this country to get ready. The aggressor will pick out the United States for the initial attack. It would be doomed if it waited till it had conquered the intervening space, even if it waited upon a declaration of war. An aggressor must strike first where the power of opposition resides, and this is situated in the United States. And it must strike swiftly, for the paraphernalia of war has put a premium on surprise. Accordingly the United States, while the spirit of aggression is rampant, must be kept in a posture of defense.

General Eisenhower spells out what this means in the life of America. Defense is no longer the monopoly of the armed services. Industry and the civilian population must be ready to go on a war footing. For industry General Eisenhower subscribes to Mr. Baruch's proposal for a plan whereby our factory strength could be mobilized instantly. As for civilians, Secretary Forrestal came out while the Eisenhower report was on newspaper desks for the reinstatement of an organ for civilian defense. UMT has its place in this scheme of things because of the prime need for readiness. Senator Taft's argument against it—that manpower has become a minor factor in the air age—is disposed of effectively. Granted, says General Eisenhower, that "airpower occupies a dominant position in modern warfare," still the ground soldier is "the keystone of armed effort." Upon him depends the capture and retention of bases whence to launch attacks. He must man shore establishments at home. He must service the new weapons of war. However, the new warfare requires that the ground soldier shall be a member of a team embracing air, sea and land branches. This elementary requirement leads General Eisenhower into a powerful plea for the encouragement of both military leadership and progressive unification—in spirit as much as organization—of the defense establishment.

What General Eisenhower has to say on preparedness for peace will doubtless not get the attention that will be paid to his observations on preparedness for war. That was the fate of the Finletter report. But it is obvious that the prevention of war is the subject closest to his heart. He has seen at first-hand the horrors of war. He knows the slim prospect of the survival of civilization if another war comes. Accordingly he goes out of his way to appeal for ERP and for support of the United Nations. This is his "long-term program." Not for him the current talk about the inevitability of war. So anxious is he to find a practical basis for enduring peace that he would develop the technique for the quest for it in the curricula of our schools. If he had not been inhibited by his office, he might well have made the suggestion applicable to the Nation's leaders. If war is not inevitable, then the quest for peace should be unceasing. It cannot thrive in an atmosphere of hate and fear. In this atmosphere there is danger of failure to seize the opportunities for peacemaking when they are presented. General Eisenhower in private life is likely to prove as vigorous in the prosecution of peace as he was of war.

Gutt's Reminder

In an address last week at Harvard University Camille Gutt, managing director of the World Monetary Fund, uttered a timely word of caution against the "dangerous assumption that all currencies, or at least all European currencies, should be devalued now and devalued substantially." Under present conditions the only practical test of the suitability of an exchange rate, he says, is whether at that rate the country is able to export. Judged by that test, France was undoubtedly justified in devaluing the franc, and the Monetary Fund officials did not oppose such devaluation. What they objected to was the French government's decision to follow a procedure that resulted in a fluctuating rate basis for exports, making it possible for the French to engage in competitive depreciation of their currency at the expense of other fund members.

Mr. Gutt properly stresses the importance of making necessary adjustments in exchange rates on an orderly basis that will help toward the restoration of "a new economic balance in a greatly changed world." He is equally emphatic in declaring that devaluation, to be fully effective, has to be accompanied by measures designed to halt inflation. A number of countries have kept down inflationary pressures by price and wage controls, subsidies and rationing. Mr. Gutt named no names, but Great Britain is obviously one of the countries to which he was referring. The British are now in the midst of a new anti-inflation drive, one of the purposes of which apparently is to stave off devaluation of the pound, at least for the time being. While devaluation of sterling would stimulate Britain's export trade, it would also result in a rise of the domestic prices of imported goods. And owing to its psychological effect exchange devaluation might have a generally inflationary effect on the British price level.

While Mr. Gutt made no mention of Britain's particular problem, he pointed out, quite significantly, that at some time in the future, when current production is adequate to meet current needs, it will be desirable for countries relying on governmental controls to abandon such measures and adjust their economies to changed conditions. At that stage latent inflation might be recognized by permitting prices to rise, or wiped out in whole or in part through extraordinary taxes or through the blocking of currencies, as has already been done in a number of countries. When this financial house cleaning has begun, reconsideration of the exchange value of a country's currency will, in Mr. Gutt's opinion, be in order and in some cases changes in parity will be necessary.

Facsimile

A four-page edition of the New York Times is to be delivered half a dozen times each day by radio to 14 leading Manhattan and Brooklyn department stores. This electronic system of delivery is called facsimile. It is accomplished by means of a scanning device, an electric eye as it were, which translates the gradations of black on a printed newspaper page into electric impulses (in the same way that a microphone converts sound waves into electric impulses), a radio transmitter which broadcasts these impulses, and a receiver, or recorder, which retranslates them into a picture of the original newspaper page and registers this picture on electrolytically sensitized paper in the receiver. Thus the customers in the cooperating New York department stores will see the Times arrive by air, or rather by electricity—a reproduction of the newspaper prepared in the composing room at Times Square.

Facsimile has incorrectly been termed a revolutionary method of publishing a newspaper. It is simply a revolutionary method of distributing a newspaper. The elaborate, painstaking and expensive process of gathering news, writing it, editing it, setting it in type and arranging it for publication all remain unchanged by facsimile. The new technique would, however, eliminate a number of exceedingly costly and cumbersome steps in getting the finished product to the reader. Stereotyping would be unnecessary; rotary presses could be forgotten; there would be no need for mail trucks or delivery boys. In short, the cost of operating a conventional newspaper plant could be cut almost in half. And this might have the tonic effect of making it economically possible for many new newspaper enterprises to be started, thus augmenting competition in a field where monopoly control is peculiarly dangerous.

Medical Insurance

In a letter of February 4, "Patient" describes the dilemma of a visiting English girl stricken with appendicitis. When advised immediate surgery was needed she decided the lesser financial evil was to fly back to England. For $40 annual cost the British compulsory health insurance plan prepaid all expenses of her illness. "Patient" implies the British plan is worth imitating.

To the freedom-loving American doctor, only the idealistic social purpose of the British panel system is worth copying. The British plan's bureaucratic regimentation of doctors with freezing of their wages, services and patient lists is not. American doctors are determined to resist substituting exhaustive paper work and stupid red tape for essential professional services. Nor will they agree to an unpredictable work schedule on any other basis than a fair and honest quid pro quo. The American doctor insists that his living wage be determined by the approval and patronage of satisfied patients in open competition with all qualified doctors in the community.

These minimal demands of a free profession determined to remain free do not make a solvent American plan impossible. Rather they permit us to profit by the mistakes of a Labor government imposing a program of complete socialization upon a heretofore free and socially conscious profession.

To this end our Federal Government should provide a dependable floor of minimal health security beneath the urgent needs of every citizen. For $40 a year a national health security insurance pool could provide noncancelable, cost-spreading self-help indemnity against health hazards that are bankrupting to everyone.

This American plan for limited health security indemnity should and must be self-supporting. Admittedly, the $40 a year estimate may be too low to give the national health security pool solvent social sufficiency. But we will never learn the basic mathematics essential for solvency until we experiment intelligently.

Working Widows

Widows with children are encouraged to go on relief, thereby becoming additional expense to the county, State or Nation, rather than provide for themselves, because they are not allowed income tax deduction on amounts they must pay to have their children cared for while they work.

A man with a wife and one child is allowed a $1500 exemption for himself and his two dependents. He pays for food, shelter and clothing, etc., for three people.

A widow with two children has the same $1500 exemption for herself and her two dependents. She pays for food, shelter, clothing, etc., for four people—herself, her two dependents and the woman to whom she must pay a living wage to care for her children. There is no tax deduction for this fourth person the widowed mother is compelled to support if she is to go out to earn her own living.

Should the widow receive this sort of consideration just because she is ambitious and capable and wishes to provide for herself and family?

Correction

In our editorial "More Food" of February 15, we stated that the Argentine wheat crop was up 1500 million tons over what had been anticipated and that the Australian crop was a billion tons over the early prospect. The correct figures are 1,500,000 and one million tons, respectively.

Inconceivable Phrase

Purism per se is probably as anathematic to the undersigned as to any of your other readers. Certainly it is a quality to the charge of which one does not usually expose himself. It smacks of a narrowness of outlook and intellectual snobbery.

Yet, in reading your editorial of January 24, "Unity: Looking Ahead," there appears to be a promiscuous use of words contained in the phrase "ideas which were not conceivable no matter how cogently presented." There is a principle in logic which states that a prerequisite for the presentation of an idea is for it to have first been conceived. The words "realizable" or "acceptable" would, in the opinion of the undersigned, be more philosophically correct in this instance.

The content of the editorial has already been amply appreciated, as indicated by the letters of response which have been thus far printed and for that reason is not discussed in this letter.

Snow-Removal Law

Ice and packed snow have made walking on Washington streets for the last few weeks an extremely hazardous undertaking. Most cities in the North which experience severe winter weather, with its accompanying ice and snow, have city laws which make it mandatory for the home owner and storekeeper to clear his sidewalk of ice and snow within 48 hours, or less, after the ending of snow or freezing rain.

District home owners, however, have let the ice and snow accumulate for days on end, lazily hoping that a never-appearing warm spell will do the ice-clearing chore for them.

Failure to clean the sidewalk in a specified time should result in a fine from the Police Department. Perhaps Representative Nixon, who fractured his arm recently on the ice in front of his own home, should be glad to initiate such legislation.

IRATE PEDESTRIAN.
Washington.

Washington needs a snow-removal law, like that of a certain Virginia city. Penalties for failure to remove the snow by noon of every day if it has fallen during the night, and six hours after a day fall, are not less than $2 nor more than $10 plus not less than $1 nor more than $10 for every hour it has been allowed to remain on the sidewalks.

Germany And The Marshall Plan

The Society for the Prevention of World War III, Inc., has indorsed the basic principles of the European Recovery Program. We believe those principles will be supported by all Americans who cherish freedom and peace. On the other hand, the society believes that while the principles are wholly admirable and correspond to the real interests of the American people, their correct implementation is of fundamental importance.

The present policy pursued in western Germany, however, will not contribute to the realization of our European Recovery Program aims because, in essence, it is an attempt to reestablish the German economy on an autarchy basis. We must also bear in mind that the food shortages and the economic situation in Germany today are largely the result of deliberate acts of sabotage on the part of the Germans themselves:

During 1947 6,319,000 head of German cattle had disappeared and were presumably sold on the black market. Several months ago the press reported that the government of Wuertemberg-Baden had underestimated the grain crop by 62 per cent. Ruhr coal production is about 50 per cent below prewar levels, and as Walter Lippmann recently pointed out, about 20 per cent of the coal produced in the Ruhr disappears. The same situation holds true regarding American shipments of cotton to Germany; thousands of bales of cotton disappeared before reaching the German factories for processing. Likewise, the German workers, aided and encouraged by their leaders, are actively engaged in sabotaging the reparations program which is so essential for the economic rehabilitation of Germany's victims.

In allocating $1,005,000,000 to Germany (as part of the $6,800,000,000 requested), plus over one billion dollars a year for food and commodities to be sent to Germany, the share of Germany amounts to more than 28 per cent of the total to be appropriated for the next 15 months for Europe. This places a heavy obligation on the American taxpayer for the rebuilding of an enemy country, which through strikes and sabotage of its coal and food production is jeopardizing its own revival.

Since Germany's threat to world peace lies not in her own capacity to wage an independent war within the next quarter of a century, but in her value as a partner in any future world conflict, it is important that her bargaining power as such a partner be kept to a minimum.

To make the rehabilitation of Europe a success, our society submitted to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the European Recovery Program be guided by the following principles:

(1) Our first consideration in the rehabilitation of Europe should be given to Germany's victims. (2) American policy regarding European recovery should aim at reversing the economic and political trends of the past 25 years which have placed Germany in the key role of economic master of Europe. (3) Germany heavy industries must be limited to peacetime needs as recommended in the final report of the United States Foreign Economic Administration.

(4) Democratic forces in western Europe must be helped in their quest for security from future German economic and military dominance because they are the only friends we have in Europe. The United States must help these countries develop their own industrial potental.

(5) Germany's coal production, the bloodstream of the European economy, should be maximized and sufficient coal delivered to her neighbors to enable them to meet the industrial level set at the Paris Conference. (6) Prompt reparation deliveries should be made to the 18 claimant nations in the form of surplus capital goods, specifically the nine million tons of surplus steel capacity which exists in the western zones. (7) All German cartels, trusts and cartel-like devices must be forever eliminated. (8) All German assets abroad must be unearthed, marshaled and vested by the occupying powers for eventual allocation among Germany's victims. (9) In helping to integrate the German economy with that of her neighbors, Germany should be given the opportunity to develop her own peaceful economy through the exploitation of her light industries and her agricultural resources and raw materials.

(10) The United States should cancel the $1,005,000,000 allocated for Germany as part of the $6,800,000,000. This would leave the military government, through $1,250,000,000 of appropriations for the next 15 months, in exclusive charge of aiding Germany to solve its food and industrial problems. (11) In order to provide Europe with the means for maintaining a stable and prosperous economy which will eventually benefit the American economy and relieve the burden of our taxpayers, the resources of the Ruhr should be placed under international ownership and control.

Washington Calling

Prices And Elections

ALL THE economic prognosticators, both amateur and professional, have now had a shot at explaining the slump in the markets. So have the politicians who tailor the facts to suit their own purposes.

After much study and pondering within the President's Council of Economic Advisers, the conclusion has been reached that the situation is still fundamentally sound. But having uttered that phrase, or an approximation of it, the President's economic seers realized that it had an unhappily familiar ring. It was what unhappy Herbert Hoover began to say in 1930.

Nevertheless, the council does believe the situation is fundamentally sound. There is not the slightest reason, in fact or in logic, for a depression.

Unsatisfied demand is still great for everything produced by industry and the farmer. Income remains, up to the present moment, at a phenomenally high level and unemployment is correspondingly low. There is a vast store of public projects that are essential and they can be pushed when and if prices drop on necessary materials.

WHEN THEY have said this much, however, the President's experts add one or two reservations. There is the fact that firms are running out of their own money to pay for expansion. Will they seek outside capital and, if they do seek it, will it be forthcoming? On the answer to this double-barreled question a great deal may turn.

The second precaution has to do with the American temperament. Americans have a low emotional boiling point. The word the experts use in their discussions is "volatile," which the College Standard Dictionary defines as "easily influenced, fickle, changeable."

The boiling point is particularly low in an election year. Charges fly back and forth, as they have in the controversy over who shot down the high-price balloon. Politics, so far as the economic high priests can discover, had little to do with the slump.

The investigation into speculation in the commodity markets may have had the effect of scaring people into getting out. Thereby the backlog of money to support the market may have been reduced. But one factor alone—better crop reports from around the world—could expalin what happened.

The only person I know of who seems to have understood that something was about to happen is Senator Robert A. Taft. This column owes Senator Taft an apology for peering at the statement he made before a Republican policy session suggesting that commodity prices were beginning to level off.

What happened could hardly be described as leveling off, but no one can dispute that prices went down. How Taft knew this would happen is something else again, for many of his colleagues who heard him make his statement in January were skeptical or contemptuous. While it was obvious that spiraling prices would eventually produce a break, most of the prophets had foreseen a continuing rise until June.

If the break proves to be no more than a "corrective recession," then it will be a healthy thing. Lower prices would mean a far healthier economy. Prices are particularly important in relation to housing. Should building prices go on climbing, then prospective buyers will be forced out of the market, no matter how desperate their need for a place to live. This one factor alone might decide whether it is to be recession or depression.

The third round of wage increases is equally important. Most union leaders indicated at the beginning of the break that they would go through with their demands. But if in four or five weeks there is a real reflection of the break in the cost of living, perhaps better sense will prevail. The pent-up demand from the rank and file of trade unionists might be satisfied with long-term gains in pension plans and paid vacations.

One diagnosis of the slump should not be overlooked. Wishful voices in Moscow were raised at once to declare that this was the beginning of what communism has long and eagerly anticipated—a depression spelling unemployment and social disorder. Communism is counting on such a depression to isolate the United States economically and politically.

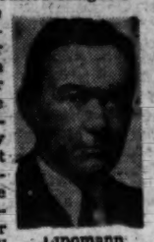
The other day, intelligence reports reached Washington of the speech of a Communist leader in eastern Europe. He told his shock troops that, between now and next November, the United States would be so divided and so jittery over the election that we would be powerless to make any important decisions; therefore the time to sabotage American objectives in Europe was now. Jitters over the market break would help to prove him right.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Coming Crisis

THE RECENT British White Paper and Sir Stafford Cripps' statement about the financial position of the United Kingdom should convince anyone, — particularly Senator Taft, who has a good head for figures when he studies them, — how extremely dangerous it would be to reduce further the amount of European aid. For even if the full amount authorized in the Vandenberg bill is made available promptly, it can only moderate the coming crisis of liquidation in the United Kingdom and in the British Empire.



Lippmann

The situation can be measured by realizing that the Vandenberg bill would provide direct assistance to the 16 nations, and indirect assistance to Canada and Latin-America, at the rate of about 16 million dollars a day. Yet the United Kingdom, and the sterling area for which it is responsible, are now spending each day over 11 million dollars more than they are able to earn. Since the Marshall Plan must also meet the most urgent deficits of western Europe and of western Germany, it can at best, even if Mr. Taft, Mr. Wherry and Mr. Taber accept it as it is, meet only a portion of the British deficit.

AS BRITAIN will have exhausted her reserves of dollars and gold by this summer, the best that the Marshall Plan can do is to mitigate the crisis—to enable the British to manage an orderly reorganization out of bankruptcy. Even with full Marshall aid, even with the favoring conditions of the fall in the world prices of food and raw materials, the great liquidation cannot be averted. It can only be managed in such a way as to prevent the catastrophe of mass unemployment and hunger in the British Isles and a galloping collapse of the British commitments in the outer world.

Even to do that will require sacrifice, discipline, and political audacity on a scale and in a degree which no free people in all history has ever had to show. All one can say, though that is a good deal, is that if any people can meet this test, the British people will meet it.

IT IS difficult, perhaps impossible at this time, to make an estimate of the impact of the British crisis upon the American economy. It is no doubt true, as almost all our own economists have been saying, that the recession of prices is a good thing, and that there is for the present no serious danger of its developing into a bad depression, and certainly not into mass unemployment and collapse. There is not only the unsatisfied demand for goods and new capital investment. There is also the fact that no administration and no Congress could or would now permit deflation to run its course as in 1929. The idea that prices, wages, production, private investment can be supported by monetary and fiscal measures and by public investment is firmly fixed in the minds of the people.

Nevertheless the British crisis will have far-reaching effects throughout the world, and many drastic and unprecedented measures, that cannot now be clearly foreseen, will have to be taken to control these effects. We must not harbor the illusion that when we have adopted the Marshall Plan, European recovery will follow. The Marshall Plan will in practice be one, but not by any means the only, instrument for controlling the economic and political effects of the crisis through which Britain, and also Germany, and therefore much of the world, will be passing before stabilization is near and recovery can begin.

THE POLITICAL effects of Britain's economic position are easier to see though they are very hard to deal with. We can say now, I think, that the greatest miscalculation which we all made about the postwar world was in failing to realize how much Great Britain was weakened by the war. Even those who never had the illusion that Russia would be a comfortable partner in the building of "one world," did take it for granted that after the war Russia would have to deal with America and Britain, with two great and equal powers. Had we been right, had Britain been able to fill the role of an equal great power in the Mediterranean and in the Middle East and in Germany, the whole postwar situation would have been radically different, and decisively easier to manage.

Our own commitments would never have become so overextended as they are today. Responsibilities for which we are unprepared, critical decisions for which our officials lack experience and training, would have been shared, not thrust upon the State Department pell mell in one emergency after another. The British, feeling a strength which they do not now have, would have displayed a statesmanship and a magnanimity in Europe and in the Middle East which Mr. Bevin is too harried to display.

THAT IS why the conception of a new Europe, formed by a political confederation of the European states that are free to join in it, is gaining such support among those who understand the situation of the world. Increasingly it is plain that even with the Marshall Plan a true recovery is not going to take place, that there must be also, and as the foundation of an economic recovery, a political reconstruction of Europe.

Without that, this country will continue to be at once overextended and isolated, compelled to bear burdens and responsibilities all over the globe, yet compelled to bear them alone—with many friends and well-wishers, to be sure, but without partners and allies who can share effectively the burden and the awful responsibility.

Palestine Test

By Sumner Welles

Price Of Procrastination

IT IS HARD to arouse a democracy to impending danger when the clouds on the horizon still seem no larger than a man's hand. Even Winston Churchill could not awaken the British people to the menace in the rise of Nazism. The peril to us in Japan's aggression against China and in Mussolini's invasion of Ethiopia went largely unperceived. But even if the tragic lessons of the recent past are to be so easily forgotten, the clouds now looming are no longer on the horizon. They are hanging over us.

This Government has repeatedly announced that the United Nations is the foundation of American foreign policy. Yet because of the failure of the United States to adopt a consistent and courageous policy on Palestine, the United Nations is today faced with the gravest dilemma in its history.

Save for Britain in the days of Baldwin it would be difficult to find a more sorry instance of a major power refusing to face facts.

The decision to partition Palestine was taken after full investigation and debate. It was in strict accordance with the provisions of the United Nations Charter. The United States was in great part responsible. This country played a leading role throughout the events that led up to that decision.

The American Government failed, however, to insist that the United Nations must be enabled to enforce its decision, and to protect life and property in Palestine until the independence of the two new states had been finally established.

FOR LACK of any United Nations police force, the members of the Palestine Commission have now been told by the British that they will be assassinated if they set foot in Palestine. Major hostilities between Jews and Arabs are imminent. The United Nations cannot carry out its decision. Because the United States has during the past two months renounced every semblance of leadership, the smaller countries are increasingly reluctant to assume any responsibility.

The Palestine Commission has at length been compelled to ask the Security Council to determine that there is a "threat to the peace" and to take action under the charter. And Washington still remains silent.

It is notorious that there is a sharp cleavage of opinion within the Government. The Army and Navy, supported by some officials of the State Department and of other departments, insist that the United States must take no action to back up its words. They allege that our growing controversy with Russia makes it unwise for us further to antagonize the Arab states or jeopardize this country's access to Near Eastern oil.

Such arguments are wholly unconvincing. The British government cannot prolong its mandate in Palestine. Once British forces withdraw, war will result unless the United Nations can send an international constabulary to Palestine. If hostilities break out, the Soviet Union will undoubtedly insist that its vital interests require it to send its own forces to maintain order in its neighborhood.

SHOULD OUR service departments prevail upon the Administration to refuse to exercise any leadership within the United Nations to maintain peace in Palestine, they will pave the way for what they fear most, namely, the extension of Soviet control over the Near East.

The arguments on oil are just as unrealistic. If a new war breaks out, the Near Eastern oil resources would certainly not be available to western Europe nor to the United States. Should peace be preserved, since the Arab governments depend upon the royalties from their oil concessions, they are hardly likely to oppose their exploitation.

But we are face to face with a far more fundamental issue.

Japan defied the League of Nations in 1932 and was permitted by the great powers to do so with impunity. The Italian aggression against Ethiopia, the civil war in Spain, and the rape by Hitler of Austria and of Czechoslovakia were the inevitable result.

The Arab states have now defied the United Nations.

The partition of Palestine is the one major question upon which the policies of the United States and of the Soviet Union have coincided. Yet this Government has so far failed to initiate any measures within the United Nations to guard against the Arab aggression which is under way, or even to protest the flagrant violation of their charter commitments by the Arab states.

IF THE United Nations is, in fact, the foundation of American policy, the United States must support the United Nations, not only when that is convenient and easy, but quite as much so when such support implies effort, sacrifice and risk.

The League of Nations collapsed because the major powers then members of the League supported the League only when it suited their own ends. They failed to support the League when it seemed that their selfish interests might be prejudiced.

We are seeing exactly the same trend. The Palestine question is a test case. Should the United States persist in its present blind inaction, it will be preparing the way for the failure of the new international organization, and if the United Nations fails, the one hope humanity today possesses for the rule of law rather than the rule of force, for the freedom and progress of mankind, and for the establishment of a peaceful world order will vanish with it.

Bill Proposes U. S. Board on Oil, Natural Ga

By The Associated Press

Creation of a national petroleum commission with broad power over production and sale of oil and natural gas is proposed in a bill offered yesterday by Representative Heselton (R., Mass.)

The commission could lay down rules as it sees fit for "national security and economy."

It would take over all present Federal functions with regard to transportation and sale. The President would name its 11 members.

The House passed a resolution asking Secretary of the Interior Krug how much petroleum products and coal are available in the United States and what the Government should do to make the "necessary supply available."

Hear Grim News

Two committees heard grim news about our future oil supplies.

1. Krug told the House Interstate Commerce Committee this country cannot continue to take 63 per cent of the world's oil consumption from 31 per cent of the world's reserves. Synthetic liquor fuels are the answer, he said.

2. The Navy informed a House Armed Services Subcommittee that it has not found anything except traces of oil in Alaska, but it still has hopes.

Krug recommended that the Government finance construction of three commercial-size plants to produce synthetic fuels. One would use oil shale, another coal, and a third gas.

Favors Private Operation

Private companies should operate the plants, Krug said, but Government help will be necessary to get them started because a private operator could not afford to compete now with natural petroleum.

He advised an immediate start on the plants "not only as a defense measure but also for our economic security."

Commodore W. G. Greenman, director of naval petroleum reserves, asked that Congress appropriate enough money to carry the Navy's Arctic exploration program through 1953. He said the Navy has spent about half the $9,600,000 appropriated in 1945 to finance the work through 1949.

The results so far in Alaska have been only encouraging, he said. Oil has not been found in commercial quantities, he added, but drilling everywhere has discovered oil-bearing sands.

Crude Foodstuffs, Other Imports Set December Record

The United States imported $120,800,000 worth of crude foodstuffs in December, the highest value on record.

The Census Bureau, reporting this yesterday, said it was one of the factors that boosted December imports in general to a record high value of $560,700,000.

Crude oil, newsprint and hide imports also were at postwar record values, the bureau said.

Imports of crude oil totaled 9,339,000 barrels valued at $18,200,000 compared with 7,512,000 barrels valued at $13,300,000 in November.

Total exports, on the other hand, dropped in December to $1,121,900,000 from $1,126,700,000 in November.

Contrbiuting to that decline was a drop in coal to 5,021,000 tons, lowest quantity since March.

Supreme Court Refuses to Rule On House Unit

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

The Supreme Court by a 6-to-3 vote yesterday refused to rule on the constitutionality of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

This left in force the 2-to-1 decision of the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals in New York, which upheld the committee, in an appeal filed by Leon Josephson, a New York lawyer.

Josephson now must serve a year in jail and pay a $1000 fine for contempt of Congress, for refusing to answer questions asked by the committee.

How the Justices Voted

Voting not to hear the Josephson case were Chief Justice Vinson; Justices Black, Reed, Frankfurter, Jackson and Burton. Voting to hear it were Justices Douglas, Murphy and Rutledge.

The House committee's authority was upheld in another case here yesterday, by Justice Edward M. Curran of the District Court. Curran ruled against 10 movie writers who — like Josephson — claimed that the un-American activities committee was against the Constitution. The writers were called before the committee here a few weeks ago and asked whether they were Communists. They would not answer, after which the committee placed in its records evidence that they were in fact members of the Communist Party. For their refusal to answer, all 10 were indicted for contempt of Congress.

Curran also refused to move the trial of the 10 to some other jurisdiction.

Trials Start Next Week

The 10 claimed they could not get a fair trial in Washington, and asked to be tried in some other city. But Curran refused, and ordered them tried here, one by one, starting next Tuesday with John Howard Lawson, former president of the Screen Writers Guild.

Ruling in Seaboard Case

Justice Black spoke for the Supreme Court yesterday in holding that South Carolina cannot force the Seaboard Railroad—which is a Virginia company—to set up a separate South Carolina firm to operate Seaboard's 736 miles of South Carolina track.

The Interstate Commerce Commision figured this would cost Seaboard $71,800 the first year and $1000 a year after that. Black said the law allows the ICC to exempt interstate railroads from State laws which burden interstate commerce.

Fertilizer Patent Invalidated

The court by a 7-to-2 vote threw out a patent given Varley Sherman Bond for a fertilizer made of a mixture of bacteria. Bond found that while most bacteria do not get on well when put together, certain strains breed very rapidly when mixed. The court held that Bond had invented nothing, that he had discovered a law of nature, and that such a discovery could not be patented.

Beside Josephson's case, the justices yesterday refused to hear:

The appeal of Lee Fook, 61, who is under a death sentence here for killing Henry Lee, in his laundry on Georgia ave. nw. on September 22, 1946.

The appeals of the AFL Butchers Union from a Missouri Supreme Court order against picketing at four markets in Kansas City.

Fourteen Nazi doctors, who appealed from the military court at Nuernburg, which ordered seven of them hanged and the others jailed for cutting up men and women like laboratory animals. The doctors claimed the military court was against the Constitution and did not give them due process of law.

The appeal of the Foremen's Association of America from an order by the United States Court of Appeals here taking away the association's right to bargain for the foremen of the L. A. Young Spring & Wire Corp. plant in Los Angeles.

The second appeal of Benjamin F. Fields, former convict promoter who was given three months in jail for contempt of the House War Surplus Property Committee.

Transom Trick

Police Peek In Gambling Case Upheld

Three District policemen who broke into a rooming house to peep over a gambler's transom were upheld by the United States Court of Appeals here yesterday.

Justice Wilbur K. Miller, for himself, and Justice Bennett C. Clark, said the peeping was ungentlemanly but not unlawful. Justice Henry W. Edgerton, dissenting, said his brethren were confused about the case, and that the gambling raid was against the Constitution.

Some two years ago the police suspected Earl H. McDonald, 38, of being in the numbers racket. On June 22, 1946, Detective Sergt. Howard Ogle opened a window of the house on 3d st. nw. and climbed in. The landlady (a Mrs. Terry) screamed when she saw Ogle, but he brushed her aside and opened her front door, to let in Detective Lieut. Roy Blick and Detective Sergt. Paule Clarke. The three searched rooms on the first and second floors.

Had No Warrant

The three officers did not have a search warrant, or a warrant for anybody's arrest.

On the second floor, one officer stood on a chair and peeped through a transom into McDonald's room. He saw adding machines, numbers slips and $968 in money. The officers then went into the room and arrested McDonald and Joseph F. Washington, 48. On the evidence taken in the raid both were given jail terms.

Justice Miller said that the policemen who peeped through the transom saw a crime being committed in his presence so that he and the others had a right to go ahead and make the raid.

All Unlawful, He says

Justice Edgerton said the whole raid was lawless, that the officers broke in the house to make an unlawful search. The question, he added, was not whether the police could look into a room in an unusual way, but whether they could look into a room from a place where they had no right to be.

Having broken into the house without a warrant, Edgerton said, the three policemen had no right to be in the hallway outside McDonald's rooms, the arrest was lawless and could not be used to justify the search. Only a few weeks ago, he recalled, the Supreme Court said the police cannot justify an arrest by a search and at the same time justify the search by the arrest.

The justice made it plain that the majority's ruling made him fear for the rights of all who live in apartments and rooming houses.

Court Refuses Further Ruling In Okla. Case

The Supreme Court by a 7-to-2 vote refused yesterday to do anything more about the Oklahoma policy of separate colleges for whites and Negroes.

Ada Sipuel Fisher—who is 23, a college graduate and a Negro—tried two years ago to enroll in law school at the University of Oklahoma, which was the only public law school in the State. A few weeks ago the court declared a State must give Negroes the same education as whites, and as promptly as whites, but left in force its 10-year-old ruling that the "equal education" may be given in separate schools.

The State then set up a three-teacher law school, but Mrs. Fisher did not go to it; instead she came back to the Supreme Court and asked the justices to order the State to let her go to the university school. A law school set up overnight, with three teachers, she said, could not possibly be "equal" to the great State school at Norman, Okla., with its large student body and able faculty. Some of the justices had said from the bench that they didn't think so either.

But the majority yesterday said the Fisher case never raised the question whether a "separate" school would be "equal" and that the court was not to rule on that point.

Justice Murphy thought there ought to be a hearing on whether the State's action was an evasion of the Supreme Court's orders. Justice Rutledge said in dissent that from the record it was plain to him that Oklahoma has disobeyed the Supreme Court, and that no overnight law school could be equal to the old and well known university school.

Soviet Extolls, Hits Composer On Same Day

By the United Press

The Soviet right hand sometimes doesn't know what the Soviet left hand is doing. Witness the current row in Russia over Composers Aram Khachaturian Sergei Prokofieff and Dmitri Shostakovich, the big three of Soviet music.

The Soviet Embassy here in its monthly "Information Bulletin," carries an article extolling Khachaturian—his "originality, melodic gifts, virtuosity of technique, inventiveness in harmony, and richness of orchestration."

On the same day—February 11—the Central Committee of the Communist Party in Moscow denounced the big three, including Khachaturian for creating undemocratic music with "formalistic distortions."

The embassy bulletin praised Khachaturian for "always searching for new paths, new treatments—the expression of altogether something new in art," and for giving expression to the "experiences and sentiments of the time."

The Central Committee accused the composers of "formalistic distortions and antidemocratic tendencies alien to the Soviet people and their artistic tastes, denial of the main principles of classical music, propaganda of atonality, dissonance and disharmony . . . renunciatin of . . . melody; a passion for muddle neuropathic combinations which transport music into cacophonic and chaotic heaping of sounds."

(See Page for Biographical Note on Kachaturian)

96 More Rails Win Coach Fare Boosts

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday authorized 96 more railroads to raise basic passenger coach fare 13.63 per cent.

The authority was given 85 lines generally operating west of the Mississippi River, and to 11 in the Southern States.

On fixe days notice to the public, they may hike basic one-way coach fares from 2.2 cents to 2.5 cents a mile, make proportionate increases in round-trip rates and increase the minimum coach fare from 10 to 15 cents.

This will bring them into line with higher coach fares set by all Eastern railroads last June, and later by most Southern lines.

Alumni In Furor

Nebraska's Chancellor Has His Fun With Bierman Gag

LINCOLN, NEBR., Feb. 16 (AP).—University of Nebraska Chancellor R. G. Gustavson threw an alumni meeting into a furor by saying he was about to name the "next coach to come to Nebraska."

"It will be Bernie Bierman of Minnesota," the chancellor said at the meeting last night. When the cheering subsided Gustavson explained that Bierman would be in Lincoln with his University of Minnesota football team for a game against Nebraska October 2.

A radio newsman, who rushed out of the room before the explanation was made, was intercepted before he could relay the "scoop" to his station.

NEBRASKA'S HEAD football coach, Bernie Masterson, has resigned.

Observers pointed out that Gustavson's gag was slightly in error, Iowa State is the first home opponent. The Minnesota game will be played in Minneapolis, not Lincoln.

Gustavson today was en route to Washington to attend two non-athletic meetings. University spokesmen said it is "possible" he might interview coaching prospects while gone.

Middies Can't Quite Find That Winning Combination

ANNAPOLIS, MD., Feb. 16 (AP).—Coach Ben Carnevale is really having his troubles these days.

Most of them can be traced to the fact that his Navy cagers play some of the toughest basketball teams in the country. His Midshipmen trot out against squads which tower over them in both height and experience. But he has become accustomed to that.

The results of the last two games are what really has him worried now.

Last Wednesday, West Virginia came to town with a team rated far superior to the Middies. And they showed just that in the first 10 minutes of play by going ahead 28-14.

IN THE FINAL period, though, Navy cut loose with everything, and it was only by the grace of a lanky Mountaineer's follow-up shot that Navy didn't win.

Saturday, it was just the opposite. The Tars built up a 24-15 advantage against Muhlenberg, then lost their hold completely while Muhlenberg started clicking and went on to win, 62-49.

If they start out like a house afire, they lose. If they start slow and come in for a rousing finish, they still lose.

If Carnevale finds the solution, the game with Penn State here Wednesday should find the Middies in the win column again.

Second-Half Rush Wins Rematch

Maryland sought to avenge an early season lacing by the University of Virginia last night, but received another trimming.

The Cavaliers' second straight triumph, a 68-56 job, was achieved before 2500 highly partisan, and at times unruly, Ritchie Coliseum spectators.

The Terrapins were in the thick of things until early in the second half when the Virginians staged an impressive set-shooting exhibition to move into the lead to stay.

Sophomore Joe Noertker of Cincinnati, Ohio, was the lad who set the Terps back on their heels. He threw in 7 of his 11 points before the second half was 2 minutes old.

Broke Deadlock

Noertker's flurry broke a 26-26 halftime deadlock and once the Cavaliers moved into the command they stayed there.

Maryland staged two abortive rallies in the second half, reducing the Virginia advantage to five points at one stage. At both instances, however, Virginia's Chuck Noe got a hot hand and kept the Terps at bay with his timely barrage. Noe got eight baskets and two free throws for 18 points, 12 of them in the second half.

To Maryland's Bill Brown, however, went high-scoring honors. Brown chipped in 20 points in the losing cause.

Fouls Aplenty

It was one of the roughest games played at the Coliseum in years with 45 personals, 23 against Maryland, called. The Terps lost Bill Edwards an dtheir diminutive little ace, Eddie Crescenze, on fouls while Bill Pandak and Ronnie Richards of the Cavaliers were eliminated via the same route.

Both teams missed enough shots—goals from the floor and free throws—to win an ordinary game. The Cavaliers miscued 17 times from the foul stripe, six times more than Maryland.

In the preliminary game, the Maryland Jayvees trounced the George Washington Jayvee squad, 85-32.

Sonny Boy

Haight Now Has Crush On Hertzberg

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

SOME YEARS AGO, when child delinquents were known as "the younger generation—what will become of them?" I conducted a kid basketball tournament.

Haight

In a bandbox gym out Georgetown way, a youngster had been making 20 and 25 baskets a game. For several days preceding his first tournament appearance, I heaped publicity on this shooting sensation.

When he played, he didn't make a single point!

Later I learned that in his home gym he had marks on the wall near the basket to guide his shots. On a strange floor, he was simply a lost ball.

Having thus established myself as a flop of long standing at picking basketball stars, perhaps I should keep the Haight Jinx off Sidney (Sonny) Hertzberg.

However, I look for this player to lead the Washington Caps to victory against the division-leading New York Knickerbockers at Uline's tomorrow.

Originally a protege of Nat Holman at City College of New York and the Knicks' top scorer with 515 points last year, Hertzberger is the player who put the punch in the 1948 Caps.

In these days of one-hand Western shots and razzle-dazzle courtmen, Hertzberger describes himself simply as an old-fashioned ball player.

"NAT HOLMAN always has been my idol ,and I play basketball the way he taught me," Sonny says. "When I turned pro, Nat advised me to stick to an orthodox style, and I shall. I still feel that the trend toward Western style players played a part in my being made a free agent by the Knickerbockers. But I managed to catch on with the greatest team in pro basketball, the Caps, and I'm grateful." It seems strange, indeed, that the streamlined Caps had to turn to the old school of basketball to land the player necessary to give them the proper balance.

They had won four games and lost seven and were floundering around in the Western Division cellar when Hertzberg joined them in Baltimore last December 11. They since have won 18 of 23

Haight's Wrong Six

Here are the six wrong statements published in Haight's quiz column yesterday:

1. James J. Corbett won the heavyweight title from John L. Sullivan, not Bob Fitzsimmons.
2. Faultless, not Fervent, won the 1947 Preakness. Fervent won the Pimlico Special.
3. Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Harry Hooper, Clyde Milan and Mel Ott all batted lefthanded.
4. Jimmy Demaret, not Sammy Snead, was the leading golf money winner of 1947.
5. Armed was the top money-winning horse for 1947 although Stymie is in front for all-time.
6. Earl Sande rode three, not four, Kentucky Derby winners.

Colts Get 9 Players In Reshuffle

Chicago, Feb. 16.—The Baltimore Colts today left the "weak sister" class of the All-America Football Conference, in the opinion of Owner Bob Rodenberg, when nine players were awarded the team in the loop's redistribution of talent.

The Chicago Rockets and Brooklyn Dodgers were given six players each.

In announcing his windfall of players, Rodenberg refused to reveal their identity but said each has at least one season's experience in professional football. He was particularly pleased with the addition of a fullback from the Cleveland Browns, who also contributed another back, and an end.

Spiro Dellerba, a 200-pounder who played freshman football at Ohio State, was thought to be the new Colt fullback. He is the Browns' No. 3 fullback under Marion Motley and Tony Adamle, a hard runner but lightly considered defensively.

Other players given the Colts, according to Rodenberg, were an end, tackle and center by New York; a back by Buffalo; a guard by San Francisco, and a tackle by Los Angeles.

The All-America delayed announcement on two current problems—1948 backers of the Chicago Rockets and the new coach of the Los Angeles Dons.

A spokesman for the league, which is completing its schedule today, said it is probable no report on the Rockets ownership will be made at this meeting. He said some interested parties are out of town and the club owners generally are so involved in executive problems that the ownership disclosure must be delayed.

The ownerless Rockets had a new problem on their hands when star Center John Rapacz of Oklahoma, an alleged "gift" from the Cleveland Browns, announced he had not signed a professional football contract.

Another Story

Coach Paul Brown of the champion Browns said Rapacz did sign a contract with his team.

If Rapacz, all-Big Seven pivot, who has a year of collegiate competition left, wanted to deny it, Brown said that was "his business." (After his denial, Rapacz said he would confer with the Browns before further comment.)

Brown, who also disclosed that the Browns had given the Rockets Tackle Roman Piskor and draft rights to Halfback Pete Ashbaugh of Notre Dame, said his club in return had received Tackle Ben Pucci and an undisclosed amount matching the bonus paid to Rapacz for signing.

Leo Kernan, Golf Pro, Badly Hurt

Baltimore, Feb. 16 (AP).—Leo Kernan, 42-year-old golf professional at the Prfncess Anne Country Club at irginia Beach, a., was reported in a "very serious" condition today in a Baltimore hospital.

Police said a car in which he was driving to Baltimore Saturday skidded on an ice-glazed section of the highway near Glen Burnie, Md., slipped off the road and struck a utility pole. Kernan suffered six or seven rib fractures, a punctured right lung, fractured pelvis and is threatened with pneumonia.

Alley Owners Back Benefit Pin Tourney

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

Washington's bowling alley operators yesterday urged every league bowler in the area to enter the Police Boys Club benefit bowling tournament, February 24-March 1.

Hap Newman and Julie Singer, chairmen of the tournament committee, point out that with only a 50-cent entry fee, lowest of any major tournament in the District, every league bowler should get into the week-long duckpin affair.

"Washington's bowlers have always supported worthwhile causes, and there just isn't one more important than the kids in this area," Newman said yesterday. "For only 50 cents a bowler can do his part in providing athletic equipment, summer camps and improved clubhouses for thousands of youngsters.

Leagues Are Ready

Another bowling veteran, Lou Kramer, manager of the busy Penn Recreation Center, thinks that a good portion of his leagues will enter en masse.

"Last year the Aphea League and Hebrew League at my alleys went in 100 per cent. Many other leagues would have had just as good a participation record but they didn't know about the tournament in time. This year they'll all know about it."

Other leagues with perfect entry records in 1947 were the Brookland Merchants', the Businessmen's, PBA Mixed and Independent Leagues at Hi Skor; the Police League at Lucky Strike; the Public Health and Junior Board of Commerce Leagues at Bethesda; the Northeast Businessmen's and Northeast Merchants' at Temple and the Holy Name League at Hiser's.

The Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday night leagues at Hiser's Boulevard; the Nativity Girls League at Takoma and the Men's Methodist Church League.

Any bowler who has rolled 15 games in league competition is eligible. Full handicap, with scratch for men 128 and women 118 will be observed. And you can enter from as many leagues as you belong to.

First prize for men is $100, and for women, $50. Total prizes will be about $1200. Despite the large prize list, the Boys Club will receive 35 cents of every 50-cent entry.

Dan Bass, Nitowitz Signed by Giants

Sanford, Fla., Feb. 16.—Outfielder Danny Bass and Second Baseman Harold (Shorty) Nitowitz, both 19, of Washington, D. C., were signed by the New York Giants today and assigned to the Giants' D farm club of Chanute, Kans., in the K.O.M. League.

Bass and Nitowitz were attending the two-weeks old Giants baseball school here. Both were members of the 1946 Washington interhigh championship Calvin Coolidge team. In 1947 Bass played for Woodward Prep, while Nitowitz was A--High second baseman at Coolidge.

Last summer Bass, who bats and throws left handed, hit .317 for the Emporia, Va., semipro team. Nitowitz, who bats and throws right handed, hit over .300 for the Marx Jewelers team of Washington which won the All-America Amateur Baseball Tournament in Johnstown, Pa.

Laraine, Leo Are Remarried

Santa Monica, Calif., Feb. 16 (AP).—Brooklyn Baseball Manager Leo Durocher and film actress Laraine Day were remarried at her home here last night.

Bishop W. M. Brown of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints performed the ceremony in the presence of a few friends. Durocher and Miss Day wanted no publicity and he told reporters earlier in the day he did not know exactly when the wedding would take place.

The couple married first in El Paso, Tex., January 21, 1947, immediately after the actress obtained a divorce in Juarez, Mexico. The day before she had divorced airport employe Ray Handricks in Los Angeles.

Wheelchair Team Asks Truman for Help on Trip

Los Angeles, Feb. 16 (AP).—A wheelchair basketball team of paraplegic combat veterans appealed to President Truman today mitting three Army hospital staff members to accompany them on a cross-country exhibition tour.

The tour, the veterans said in a telegram to the President, faces cancellation unless a doctor, a coach and a trainer from Birmingham Hospital at nearby Van Nuys are authorized to go along. The veterans said appeals to Veterans' Administration officials in Washington for such authorization had been turned down.

The team had planned to compete against other teams in regulation basketball games, played from wheelchairs. The first game is scheduled at Denver next Wednesday, and others during the proposed 14-day airplane tour are scheduled at Kansas City, Chicago, Buffalo, Boston, New York, Washington, Richmond, Cincinnati and Memphis.

Hoyas Clash With Fordham Here Tonight

Georgetown University's Hoyas, who haven't won a basketball game in more than three weeks, buck up against the strong Fordham Rams tonight at 8:45 at the National Guard Armory.

Not since January 24, when they defeated Texas Wesleyan, have the Hoyas won a game. And it's of little consolation to the Hilltoppers that their four defeats since then have been against the stiffest kind of opposition—Holy Cross, N. C. State, Penn State and undefeated New York U.

The Hoyas have won only nine out of 22 this season. The Rams have captured 13 out of 16.

However, the Rams are trying to shake out of some sort of slump themselves. After winning their first 11 in order, they lost three out of five. Their most recent loss was an 85-57 shellacking at the hands of Army.

Lost to Columbia, Syracuse

The other two teams to conquer Fordham this season were Syracuse and unbeaten Columbia. Among the teams beaten by Fordham are Iowa, Brooklyn, Yale, St. Francis, Villanova, Rutgers and St. John's.

The Hoyas should do considerably better against the Rams than they did against N. Y. U., when they had to contend with 6 foot, 7 inch Adolph Schayes. Georgetown and Fordham will be a good match in the height department.

Leading the Fordham contingent will be Capt. Jerry Smith, who ranks twenty-second among the Nation's scorers, and who tallied 22 points against Army last week.

Local Boy in Lineup

Bobby Mulvihill, former Gonzaga High of Washington, D. C., star, also figures to cause the Hoyas a lot of grief. He was the chief cause for Fordham's 58-42 triumph over Georgetown last season. Fordham's other starters will be Daniel Graham, Alfred Shields and John Bach.

Frank Alagia, who got his first Georgetown starting assignment against N. Y. U., seems to have earned the left forward position permanently. The other four will be Tommy O'Keefe, the Hoyas' leading point producer, Ray Corley, Danny Kraus and Kenny Brown.

In the only other college game tonight involving a local team, George Washington plays the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington, Va., and G. W. should win. The Colonials defeated VMI, 59-40, here earlier in the season.

Colonials Nip W-L in Last Minute, 66-65

Lexington, Va., Feb. 16 (AP).—George Washington University's cagers produced two field goals in the final minute of play here tonight to squeeze by Washington and Lee, 66-65.

The Colonials Ray Adler and Phil McNiff needed exactly 15 seconds of the last minute to throw up a hook shot and a layup to win the Southern Conference battle.

Dramatic as the last minute was, it was the superb retrieving of the ball under the basket by John Moffatt, Colonial forward, that kept George Washington close to the Generals.

George Washington's victory was a reverse duplication of a previous game between the teams, won by Washington and Lee, 73-72.

Colonials Hold Third

The loss created a record of six defeats against five wins for the Generals in their late bid for a Southern Conference tournament berth. George Washington maintained its third-place standing in the league.

Until the last minute, the Colonials never gained the advantage. Washington and Lee led at the half, 33-31.

Adler set the scoring pace with 17 points. Bob Goldsmith, the Generals freshman center, bagged 15.

Both quintets played with individual stars on the sidelines. The Colonials were without the services of Bill Cantwell, star forward, who failed to make the trip due to a leg injury. Washington and Lee played without Fred Vinson, a guard, who was out of the lineup because of a cold.

Stribling Wins On TKO in 7th

Ren Stribling, hard-hitting Washington middleweight, won a technical knockout over Delmas (Kid) Wolfe in 1:20 of the seventh round of the scheduled 10-round feature bout at Turner's Arena last night.

Ben Harrison kayoed Lindsay Wamble in the second round; Kid Willey and Miles Jones draw and Puggy Lyons defeated Bobby Suma in the opening four-rounder.

Washington Light-Heavy Sam Jefferson decisioned Baltimore's Toby Reed in the five-round semi-windup.

Tuttle, Saunders Pace Kendall to 64-31 Win

Kendall School for the Deaf, paced by its high-scoring twosome, Truitt Saunders and Marvin Tuttle, won its sixth straight game yesterday against National Training School, 64-31.

Saunders, who tallied 32 points, and Tuttle, who bagged 28, were too much for NTS.

Giants? Indians?

Bobo Gets His Release, Where Now?

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Where, oh where will our wandering Bobo go, now that he has been officially released by the New York Yankees?

"Just tell 'em I've narrowed my choice down to 15 clubs, all in the majors," the emancipated pitcher declared yesterday.

"It could be the Giants, the Indians, the Pirates, the Red Sox, the Phillies, or any other team except the Yankees," he raved on.

"Mr. Newsom," Mr. Newsom said, "is preparing his own statement and when I've finished I'll announce something. Okay, Bo?"

The Unemployed

Officially Bobo became a free agent only yesterday when the Yankees announced that all clubs had waived on him. Actually, he's been unemployed since February 6, when the Yankees decided to give him the unconditional release he requested last fall after the Yanks won the World Series.

Bobo admitted he could easily fit into the plans of any team which would fit into his financial plans. "Me 'n' Greenberg could help Cleveland a lot," he said modestly. "And I wouldn't be a drawback with the Giants, either."

Indications are that Bobo will strut his stuff in the Polo Grounds this year. He was all set to sell himself to the Giants last year, but the Yankees upset his plans when they claimed him on waivers from the Nats.

Ooh—What Griff Did

"Mr. Griffith wouldn't give me my release last year and it cost me $20,000. The Giants wanted me and I know they would have gone that high, if not higher."

But wherever the Great Traveler goes it won't be for long. He's baseball's original man in motion. He's now looking for his twenty-third baseball job since he broke into the minor league 19 years ago.

He's been with the Nats (four times), the Yankees, Red Sox, Athletics, Tigers and Browns in the American League and has graced Ebbets Field and Wrigley Field for the Dodgers and Cubs, respectively, in the National League.

Friends Frosh Win

Sidwell Friends freshmen defeated the Priory frosh, 41-34, yesterday at Friends. Bill Norris was high man for the winners with 15 points.

Alehouse Annie Is Still Missing

Police Recover Two Missing Show Dogs but Get Mixed Up

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—Two dogs which disappeared from a loading ramp at Madison Square Garden after the close of last week's Westminster Kennel Club show, were found today, but police got mixed up in identifying them.

A third dog which disappeared at the same time still is being sought.

The two dogs were found in a crate in a hallway two blocks from the Garden by Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Farber on their return from a weekend visit with relatives. Police took the animals to a station house and identified them as Shielings Siren, Scottish terrier owned by Mrs. W. Stewart Carter of Louisville, Ky., and Alehouse Annie, Irish terrier owned by Howard C. Rice of Brattleboro, Vt.

However, the Westminster Kennel Club said that Dr. Samuel Milbank, one of the club judges, went to the police station for the dogs and discovered that instead of Alehouse Annie, one of the recovered dogs was Strathglass Peggy Ann, Welsh terrier owned by Hugh Chisholm of Port Chester, N. Y.

Alehouse Annie still is missing, the Kennel Club said.

As Head Coach

Ray Morrison, of Temple, Reported Heading for Yale

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—It was reported in New York tonight that Ray Morrison is slated to become head coach and athletic director at Yale but in Philadelphia the veteran Temple mentor said the report is "news to me."

"I am not going to become coach or athletic director at Yale," Morrison added.

The New York Daily News, in a story by Bill Chipman, said it had learned from a reliable source that Morrison, now in his eighth year as head coach at Temple, would be appointed to the Yale post "within a few days."

The newspaper reported Robert Kiphuth, present Yale athletic director, would be moved to a new position created in the department of physical education—as planned when the Yale position was offered to Columbia's Lou Little.

The News added that while the Yale salary for Morrison was not known, it was believed to call for more than the $12,000 a year he is receiving at Temple.

Morrison has been coaching at Temple since 1940. Previous to that he was football chieftain at Vanderbilt from 1935 to 1939.

GW Denies Dissension Rumor

Rest for an old leg injury was given as the reason Bill Cantwell, the District's leading collegiate basketball scorer, was missing from the George Washington University squad which faced Washington and Lee last night at Lexington, Va.

Contrary to rumors of team dissention, Cantwell was reportedly left behind for X-ray of an old knee injury and to rest up for a bitter schedule ahead.

Meanwhile, speculation as to the successor to Skip Stahley as GWU's head football coach continued as wild and premature as ever. Stahley's contract has another year to run. Anticipating his failure to renew it, a GWU source said authorities had extended "feelers" to several men, among them former G st. greats such as Tuffy Leemans, Johnny Fenlon and Harry Deming.

Big Dial, Beau Dandy Finish Even

Hialeah, Fla., Feb. 16 (AP).—Arguments raged among onlookers immediately after the running of today's featured Dinner Key Purse, as to whether Beau Dandy or Big Dial had finished first—and, when the camera's evidence was posted, both sides were right.

Half right, anyway, for the photo decision was a dead heat.

Beau Dandy, flying the famed Calumet silks, and Big Dial, representing Hart & Jacobson of Washington, D. C., could not be separated as they flashed home three-quarters of a length before Mrs. E. L. Hopkins' Three Rings.

Small Payoffs

The mutuels board in the infield showed a set of anemic payoffs, Big Dial being favorite and Beau Dandy a close second choice. The latter returned $2.40, $2.50 and $2.40 across the board, while Big Dial paid $2.30, $2.20 and $2.30.

Three Rings showed $2.70 for running third in the field of six 3-year-olds.

A banner crowd of 17,774 enjoyed the sport and balmy weather. They saw the deadlocked winners complete the 7-furlong dash in 1:26 1-5 over a muddy track.

Third Start for Beau Dandy

This was only the third start of Beau Dandy's career. He did not race last season and in two attempts at the current meeting, he ran second and then won. Trainer Jimmy Jones scratched Coaltown, which would have made the Calumet entry a prohibitive choice. Big Dial had run fourth in his only winter outing here.

Shortly after a good start, Doug Dodson urged Beau Dandy to the front, but the Bull Lea colt had to race head and head with Quickset for nearly a half. He gained a length advantage around the bend, then was joined by Big Dial for the stretch drive.

Big Dial, a Kentucky Derby candidate, last in the early stages, drew up on the outside and it seemed he would draw away, once having caught the leader. Beau Dandy proved himself a game colt, though, hanging on stubbornly for a split decision.

"No 130-Pound Horse":

Trainer Jones Says Armed Doubtful Starter in Widener

Hialeah, Fla., Feb. 16 (AP).—Trainer Jimmy Jones of Calumet Farm said today that Armed is not a certain starter in next Saturday's Widener Handicap.

"No definite decision has been made as to Armed and the Widener and none can be expected until later in the week," said Jones. "I do know, though, that Armed is 7 years old and is no longer a '130-pound horse.' As far as I am concerned, I would have preferred giving him a rest; I think he needs freshening up now, and it probably would have been better not to have run him Saturday, or in the Widener, either, in my opinion. However, I can't say any more about next weekend now. The matter must be discussed further."

Warren Wright's glamour gelding finished a belated third in Saturday's McLennan of a mile and a furlong, after going wide on the first turn and experiencing some difficulties on the last bend.

By "130-pound horse" Armed's trainer meant that in his present form, the gelding no longer, in his opinion, merits carrying that weight.

Protest Filed Against Lions

The Washington Lions, showing their best form of the season in their last two starts, face the strong Cleveland Barons at 8:30 tonight at Uline Arena.

The Lions were amazed yesterday when they learned that the league-leading Pittsburgh Hornets have lodged a protest with league president, Maurice Podoloff, over the Lions' alleged use of ineligible players in Friday's Washington victory and Saturday's tie with the Hornets.

According to the Hornets' claim, Maurice Robidas, Tiny Tamminen and George Hayes, Lion rookies who aided in the surprising showings against Pittsburgh, were not signed to contracts and were thus playing illegally.

Coach Jack Riley will present his side of the case to Podoloff today. Riley was disgusted by the Pittsburgh protest.

"I certainly feel that this action on the part of Pittsburgh doesn't speak well for their sportsmanship, Riley said last night. "We didn't alibi when Pittsburgh won two close decisions over us earlier in the season."

"We try to bring in a few new faces to stop the competition and tthe league leaders cry about it. Obviously the Hornets want everything their own way, but we are going to have plenty to say before the final decision on those two games is passed down."

Mangrum Wins Playoff With a 65

Harlingen, Tex., Feb. 16 (AP).—Lloyd Mangrum fired a five under par 65 too whip Jimmy Demaret by four strokes in the playoff for the $2000 top prize in the Lower Rio Grande Valley Open here today.

Mangrum, 1946 National Open champion, breezed around the front side in 31 strokes and tacked on a 34 coming home.

Demaret had nines of 34-35—69.

The $2000 Mangrum collected today boosted his earnings for 1948 to $8188, top man in the PGA winter circuit. Demaret pocketed $1400 to bring his take to $7448, second only to Mangrum.

An estimated 2000 spectators saw the final match.

The Pros Fight

The tournament was marked by a fist fight between Henry Ransom of Ravinia, Ill., and N. G. Von Nida, Sydney, Australia, and the resignation of Lawson Little, Cleveland, as chairman of the rules committee.

Little quit, he said, because recommendations by his committee for disqualification of certain players was not followed.

Ransom and Von Nida came to blows over an argument over a rule.

Out of the turmoil came an announcement that George Schneiter, Ogden, Utah, chairman of the PGA Tournament Committee, had been granted blanket authority to enforce all rules.

County Games Top High Card

Two important Prince Georges county basketball games highlight today's 17-game high school card.

Maryland Park and Bladensburg, tied for first place in the county's Class A boys conference, with 3-1 records, clash at 8:30 p. m. at Maryland Park. The winner will clinch at least a tie for first place since only one more week remains before the end of the county league season.

Mount Rainier seeks to tighten its grip on first place in the county's Class B boys conference when it takes on last-place Surrattsville at Mount Rainier. The Mounts have won eight in a row against an opening day loss, while Surrattsville has lost all seven of its starts.

The Mounts can also assure themselves of at least a tie for first by winning tonight.

Maryland Park and Bladensburg, principals in the Class A race, and Mount Rainier are all looking beyond tonight's tilts to the Maryland State Championships which take place March 2-10.

Walter Has A Crush on Caps' Hertzberg

games and today are leading the Western Division with 22 wins against 12 losses.

Hertzberg is an accomplished set shot who scores from distances while shooting with both hands. Unlike a majority of the present-day shots who arch their tosses, Sonny bullets them on a line

However, he is equally as clever as a strategist and floor man, and possibly at his best in the clutch when his team is holding a scant lead with, say, two minutes to go.

Then Nat Holman's training is most pronounced.

Hertzberg takes the ball in the back court as much as Nat once did with the Celtics. He dribbles, pivots and passes with a calm precision that maddens the opposition and, more often than not, forces his overanxious opponents to commit fouls.

Sonny is almost certain death from the free line. On one occasion this season he converted 15 successive foul tries without the semblance of a miss.

THE 195 POINTS in 26 games credited him have been more important than the statistics show. He seldom averages playing more than a half, and always seems to be most potent when the chips are down.

The Caps needed no introduction to Sonny Hertzberg when he joined them in Baltimore last December 11.

Late last season the locals had won 27 successive games without a loss on the home floor. They met the Knicks here in a game they considered routine, but New York had other ideas.

The hustling Knicks, paced by a 28-point scoring performance by Hertzberg, forgot to read Washington's clippings and proceeded to administer the Eastern Division champions the only reversal they suffered in 30 starts on the home floor.

Come to think it, the Caps now have won 44 of 47 games on the home floor in two years of Association of America competition, having taken 15 of 17 here this year.

So whenever anyone mentions that the Caps could have whipped the Original New York. Celtics any day in the week, they should take time out to thank the old Celtics for producing the great Nat Holman who, in turn, developed Sonny Hertzberg.

Perhaps it's Sonny's oldtime style that I like, but regardless, he's my boy. See him go.

Ring Ruling Wrong—Ford

Contrary to what the D. C. Commissioners and the Boxing Commission have decided, Attorney Charles Ford yesterday declared the Boxing Commission has the power to regulate boxing dates.

Ford, who represented the Turner Arena interests in a court case against the Boxing Commission over a year ago, said the court ruling gave the commission "discretionary powers." The court gave Turner's Arena permission to stage a show after the commission had turned the arena date down.

At that time, the commission operated on a policy that no more than one professional show could be staged within a week. The commission interpreted its reversal as meaning it had no power to regulate dates and only last week declared pro boxing "open," that promoters could stage shows as often as they pleased if their attractions were approved by the commission.

This latest chapter over who has a right to operate, came last week when the commission granted the Liberty Athletic Club permission to stage the Smuggy Hussey-Sonny Horne show at Uline Arena February 23.

The Turner's Arena interests claimed they should be given priority over dates because they operate every Monday, while "seasonal promoters," as Ford referred to the Liberty A. C., run only two or three shows a winter.

What is Sour Mash Bourbon?

"Sour Mash" is a type of whiskey distilled in the traditional, native Kentucky manner, which brought this state its fame for fine bourbon. It requires more time and is the most expensive bourbon whiskey made.

"Sour mash" bourbon is not sour, but is smooth, fragrant, and full-flavored when made on a good formula by a distiller with the knowledge of this old-fashioned method.

When you see "Sour Mash" on the label of a reputable distiller, it is your assurance of quality. Few labels today carry the proud legend "Genuine Sour Mash" as does Old Fitzgerald—Kentucky's Favorite Bonded Bourbon.

Bridges Supports Vandenberg on ERP

Senate Foreign Relations Committee Head Feels 12-Month Spending Sound

Qualified support of the coming "Vandenberg bill" on European recovery came yesterday from Chairman H. Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Bridges said the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had taken a "sound" decision in approving a spending figure for only 12 months instead of for 15 as President Truman had asked.

He also praised the plan to set up a sepaarte Government agency to administer it and a joint congressional committee to act as "watchdog" over its operations.

Hearings Held Needed

As to the cost, he said his committee would need "fairly exhaustive hearings" to check the $5,300,000,000 figure authorized by the Foreign Relations Committee. This is the same estimate made by the Administration for the 12-month period.

"Some of the figures are going to be disputed," said Bridges, adding that he and his committee would want "much more" information from the State Department. He said he wanted to know, for example, what part would be played in the program by trade with eastern Europe and what Western Hemisphere countries would extend credit to western European countries.

Subscribes to ERP

"I subscribe to the objectives of the European Recovery Program," Bridges said. "I subscribe, also, to the need for economy in government. It is my hope that Congress will provide an amount adequate for a sound European recovery program.

"It is also my hope that no unwise appropriation of money or unwise and excessive drain on our Nation's production of goods will make the cost of a strong and peaceful Europe an unwarranted burden on the American people."

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg's Foreign Relation Committee will meet today for final approval of the bill it tentatively approved, by unanimous vote, last Friday.

Ex-D. C. Girl Gets 6 Months In Hungary

Budapest, Hungary, Feb. 16 (AP). Miss Elizabeth Priozl-Pallos, an American citizen, was sentenced to six months in prison today on a charge of failing to report alleged subversive actions to police.

Miss Pallos, a native of Pittsburgh and once a resident of Washington, D. C., was a secretary and interpreter for the Associated Press office in Budapest when arrested.

"Acting as secretary to (AP correspondent) Jack Guinn, member of the secret American organization, civil information corps, she was bound to know that her employer stood in the services of an organization aiming at the overthrow of the present political system in Hungary," the verdict read.

Confessed Spy Claims American Citizenship

Prague, Feb. 16 (AP).—The spy trial of "Dorothy Brown," 21 a pouting blonde, was postponed today to allow Czechoslovak authorities to investigate her claims to American citizenship.

She testified she was born in Washington, D. C. Authorities believe she is lying.

She was indicted as a spy hired by a mysterious "Czech in British uniform" to obtain military barracks plans for "a certani military power." She freely admitted the charge.

She was also accused of spreading venereal disease. She admitted that charge, too.

She told a story of having been brought back to Germany at the age of eight by her parents, of having lost her papers, and of having been spirited from a German bordello at Buchenwald in 1945 to Czechoslovakia.

Her father, she testified, was a "William Brown of Washington, D. C., an industrial engineer who wrongfully sold a patent but was released on the condition that he go to Germany and spy for the United States."

He was shot by the Germans in Berlin, she said, and her mother, a Jewish native of Pilsen, died in a concentration camp.

She admitted dealing with the mysterious Czech "to fight communism in Czecholslovakia and to disrupt the security police." The state says she was a spy for America and Britain.

She told a reporter in good English that William Brown was her "second father" and she did not know her real father.

She said she could not remember any street address in Washington, nor could she recall the name of the boat on which she and her mother and Brown sailed to Europe nor the city from which they sailed. She could remember no landmarks in Washington.

Federal Aid For Schools Urged by NEA

The nation's schools are in worse financial condition today than in the prewar period, 1939-40 and urgently need Federal aid, the National Education Association said yesterday.

The view was based on results of a survey of 1946-47 school expenditures which showed that school boards had 20 per cent less purchasing power in 1947 than they had in 1940.

A similar inventory conducted in 1940 showed that "thousands of public school systems had too little money to buy an acceptable amount and quality of schooling for all children," the NEA said.

Rising Costs Cited

Dr. ohn K. Norton, a director of the survey, estimated that it will take an appropriation of from five to six million dollars to bring the per pupil expenditure in all states up to $99, the current midpoint of expenditures throughout the nation. Now pending before Congress is a three hundred million dollar Federal aid bill.

The survey showed that while schools spent an average of 66 per cent more per pupil in 1947 than in 1940 they should have spent 86 per cent to keep pace with rising costs.

Schools that were poorly supported in 1940 are still poverty stricken despite relatively large percentage increases, the report said.

Inequalities Still Exist

"Enormous inequalities in expenditure per pupil continue to exist both within individual States and among the States," the report said.

House Passes Army, Navy Missions Bill

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Legislation authorizing the appointment of American military and naval missions to foreign governments was passed by the House yesterday—without an opposition voice being raised.

Backers of the bill were agreeably surprised when it went through under unanimous consent procedure. Chairman Walter G. Andrews (R., N. Y.) of the House Armed Services Committee agreed to an amendment specifying that the measure not grant any authority to send combat troops overseas.

The bill would give permanent legislative authority to the maintenance of American military missions in Greece, Turkey, Iraq, Iran or other foreign governments requesting aid in developing their armed forces. Present United States missions are maintained under emergency war powers of the President. They will have to be withdrawn when the war ends officially unless the bill is passed. It now goes to the Senate.

Such United States missions were maintained in Latin America prior to the war under special legislative authority. The present bill would permit the President to send advisors anywhere in the world when asked for by the country concerned.

Even broader legislation to provide military aid to Western Hemisphere nations is pending in Congress. This would empower the President to transfer arms as well as lend advisors to Canada and Latin American countries.

The fire, of unknown origin, destroyed the second floor of the three-story building.

New British Envoy Lauds Marshall Plan

Oxford, England, Feb. 16 (AP).—Sir Oliver Franks, British Ambassador-designate to the United States, said today success of the Marshall Plan was "absolutely basic" to world recovery.

He said he thought the next few months would show increasingly closer economic relations among countries of the western hemisphere and predicted the United States and Britain would find themselves in "ever closer relations through the coming years."

He said frankly he has no preconceived "program" for his Washington job but expected to devote much of his time to the American end of the European recovery program or Marshall Plan.

He said it would take more than Marshall Plan aid to put Britain on its feet. Unless there is world recovery, he said, Britain would be unable to make full use of the "real opportunity to surmount the majority of its big economic difficulties" which the Marshall Plan offered.

Marshall Invited

Richmond, Va., Feb. 16 (AP).—Secretary of State George C. Marshall has been invited to speak at the American Legion's banquet for urary 23, Legion headquarters announced today.

"My biggest job DOESN'T PAY A CENT!"

Any city can be made a still better place to live in if its citizens say: "Let's do something about it!" This stimulating article tells how to start

by RALPH H. BLANCHARD
Executive Director, Community Chests and Councils

Ralph H. Blanchard

IT'S easy to complain how bad things are in our city. But who's to blame? Many times, only ourselves!

A city is just a big group of families. Its schools and its parks, its hospitals and its libraries, its concert halls and its playgrounds will be no better, in the long run, than we are willing to support. Even a few determined men and women can do wonders . . .

Take the case of the family I'll call the Martins. Ted Martin had read item after item about school kids getting into trouble. Ted didn't like that sort of thing in the city where he was raising a son. And when he read one more story of a school boy in a jam, he exploded.

"Confound it," he roared, "why doesn't somebody do something about this? Why aren't these kids kept busy at decent things?"

Son Jimmy said, "There is a boys' clubhouse, Dad. But it's dying on its feet, because it can't find enough grown-up leaders to teach the sports and hobbies that the fellows want."

Ted thought it over. Next day, he went out to the Clubhouse, had a talk with the director. And, almost before he knew it, found himself volunteer coach of the basketball team.

HOW CAN YOU HELP?

Youth centers	Community Chest drives
Scouts, "Y's"	Day nurseries
Citizenship classes	Civic auditorium
Clean-up campaign	Slum clearance
New library branch	More playgrounds
Better schools	Hobby classes

Night of the first game, Ted simply glowed with pride. He had uncovered a vital new interest in life. He had found scores of new friends. And he knew that he was making the city a better place for his own children to grow up in.

Try it in your city! Unselfish interests outside the home give the family a new bond within the home. There's a sense of real accomplishment that all share in.

Of course, you can't go all-out for every community activity. But, with planning, you can often contribute time or money that will give some needed project a boost. Every family should earmark a definite part of its income—even if it's only a little—for such purposes. Then, when your help is needed, you can give with an open heart!

Think of community work as bringing a double advantage to your family: it makes your city a better place for you to live in . . . and it unites your family in an adventure that's really big!

How to PLAN for Family Happiness

● Budgeting can help you contribute money to community projects. But that's only part of sound money planning. You'll be more likely to have enough money on hand when you need it, if you'll follow these few simple rules:

FOR TODAY . . . The first thing, for most families, is to take care of the larger fixed items such as rent, taxes, in[illegible]nce, mortgage and installment payments, etc. So start by ac[illegible]p all your fixed items for the year, divide by 52, and set aside that [illegible]t weekly.

Also every family should have a "rainy day" fund [illegible]ual to at least four weeks' income. Set aside a little every week until you have that much. Then, you'll know how much you can spend for food, clothing, heat, light, amusements, and so forth.

FOR TOMORROW . . . We live in a changing world. Family needs and circumstances change . . . living costs . . . taxes. If you have not had your life insurance program reviewed lately, the chances are 2 to 1 that it should be brought up to date.

There are so many ways in which you can use your life insurance, that you should have the life insurance you now own checked to see if it is suited to your needs. This is a service that comes with your life insurance.

The person best equipped to help you with this is the well-trained life insurance agent. Get in touch with your agent, or write your life insurance company. INSTITUTE OF LIFE INSURANCE, 60 [illegible]ast 42nd Street, New York 17, N. Y.

Langer Studies Cattle Vs. Human Health Outlay

NOTES FROM MY LITTLE BLACK BOOK—

HEALTH: Chairman Langer of the Senate Civil Service Committee, has launched an interesting study. He wants to find out if the Government spends more money on the health of hogs, cattle, and other livestock than on human beings. He has a hunch that livestock is better cared for. Incidentally, the Senator favors a full-dress health program for Federal workers. He points out that members of Congress can be treated free at the Bethesda Naval Hospital, so he asks: "Why not similar facilities for Federal workers?"

CAA: Commerce Secretary Harriman has recommended to the President that he appoint F. B. Lee to be Administrator of Civil Aeronautics. Lee is a deputy administrator and an able executive.

CAPITOL HILL: Senator Maybank (D., S. C.) has asked the Senate Secretary to publish a list of all Senate employes and their salaries. He wants this done annually. Until recently, the list was open to public inspection. Now it isn't possible to find out officially how many relatives of Senators are on the Senate payroll.

MAIL: The Post Office Department takes a big loss on insured mail. Last year it paid out $17,200,000 for investigations and record-keeping of insured mail. It took in only $2,641,687 in that office. This unit an dits activities is likely to be reorganized. Another change in the mill would relieve special delivery messengers of making lists of all special delivery items. It would save $350,000 a year.

CAA: This agency has asked that it be given the function of the Civil Aeronautics Board to issue safety regulations. The Finletter report also urged this activity be switched to CAA.

BOOKLETS: Some Federal workers must have had a bad weekend. In yesterday's mail were 13 cards, either unsigned or with no addresses, requesting copies of the Civil Service booklets explaining the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson retirement bill. But the hundreds of others who gave their names and addresses will get the valuable documents shortly after the bill becomes law. And you can have a copy reserved for you by merely writing me a card in care of The Washington Post.

POINT: I've just read a speech by Representative Lane (D., Mass.) in which he asked this pertinent question:

"Could it be that Government workers are being ground into poverty because they cannot strike?

"Workers in industry have been forced to strike on two occasions since the end of the war in order to win necessary wage increases. And a third round of strikes is coming up. But postal and all other Government workers are caught in an economic squeeze that will impoverish them unless financial help is soon forthcoming."

RESULT: The low pay rates are reflected in the lack of interest in clerk, carrier, and special delivery messenger jobs in the City Postoffice. Only 3000 have applied, despite loud drum-beating by Civil Service. The deadline to file is tomorrow. . . . About 2500 have applied for the District and Federal police exam. They will be examined February 28. In normal times, many times those numbers would have applied.

INS: A regional office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service will be left in Philadelphia when the headquarters of that agency is moved here in early April. It will have about 150 employes.

CIVIL SERVICE: Exams for geologist and patent examiner have been announced. For all you people who took the accountant and auditor exam for CAF-7 through 12 jobs last summer, this is the situation: Only the public accounting option of the test is being graded. The other options are "blocked" by laid off career employes who are qualified for any openings.

WAA: Its proposed transfer to Federal Works is causing all kinds of legal complications, foremost of which is the job right of displaced career people. War Assets has about 26,000 employes now, and plans to slice this number in half by July 1. But about 12,000 of this total are career people.

What happens to them—do they take the jobs of FWA career people or will they be lopped off without regard to present reduction in force rules? This is the tough one.

WAA is scheduled to get down to fewer than 5000 employes by July 1, 1947, which means jobs must be found for about 8000 career people in the next 17 months. And it means, too, that the DCE program hasn't yet been licked.

Ice Floe Breaking Up at Three Sisters Threatens Potomac Flood

BRIDGES BUFFETED—Above is a general view of the Potomac River looking downstream from Three Sisters Island toward Key Bridge. Ice breaking up with mild weather has dammed the river to dangerously high levels. A Coast Guard icebreaker and other tugs stood by last night for emergency work as the Weather Bureau warned of flood danger. Property owners along the riverfront were evacuating possessions. Trees along the Potomac above Chain Bridge were snapped like matchsticks as the floe piled up

More Power Proposed for Alexandria's City Manager

Under Virginia U. Charter Proposal He Would Appoint Principal Officials

Major revisions in the Alexandria city charter were recommended yesterday by the Bureau of Public Administration of the University of Virginia.

The suggested changes all relate to the office of the city manager.

The report, prepared following a study made at the request of the Alexandria city council, recommended that the entire charter be reviewed within the near future.

The city council will meet in special session tonight to discuss the recommendations. Council Finance Committee Chairman Everett A. Hellmuth said Delegate Armistead L. Boothe has agreed to initiate in the State General Assembly legislation to effect the proposals if the council approves.

More Power to Manager

The bureau's report recommended:

1. The city manager be allowed to appoint all officers whose method of appointment is not otherwise specified by State or city law. The city council now has this power.

2. Creation of seven city departments, the head of which would be appointed and removed solely by the city manager. The departments recommended: finance, public works, police, fire, public health, public welfare, and recreation and parks.

3. Provision for an independent annual audit. Although such has been done since 1932, there is no law requiring it.

Would Combine Offices

The proposed department of finance would combine the present separate offices of city auditor, tax assessor and tax inspector. The only of these officers, only the tax inspector officers is now appointed by the city manager.

The Council would be authorized to create other positions as necessary, but could not abolish or alter the seven basic departments.

Effect of the consolidation would be to give the city manager appointing power over six of the 11 officials or bodies now appointed by council. Appointments remaining within the council's jurisdiction would be: city manager, city clerk, Alexandria Housing Authority planning commission, board of zoning appeals and board of architectural review.

Woman Late For Work Hurt By Streetcar

2 Cars Crash on Same Mt. Rainier Loading Platform

A Government stenographer overdue for work, was struck and severely hurt when she ran in front of a streetcar yesterday.

The victim, Miss Mary Kate Ellis, 39, of 2019 I st. nw., stenographer in the office of general counsel for the Treasury Department, was taken to Emergency Hospital suffering a skull fracture and other injuries.

Police said she was struck by a streetcar on Pennsylvania ave., between Madison pl. and 15th st. nw., at 9:02 a. m., two minutes after she was due for work nearby. Miss Ellis, police said, alighted on a northside streetcar loading platform and darted across toward the southside platform.

Though no charges were pressed, traffic investigators said she was "crossing so as to create a traffic hazard." Operator of the streetcar was identified as Glen R. Erickson, 30, of 6221 61st pl., Riverdale, Md.

Drunk-Driver Case

'School' Cuts Sentence By 60 Days

Municipal Court Judge Aubrey Fennell yesterday sentenced a graduate of the District's traffic school to serve only 60 days in jail or pay $200 for driving while drunk.

Five other traffic violators, appearing after their graduation from the school, were released by Fennell on their personal bonds.

"Your attendance at traffic school just saved you 60 days in jail," Fennell told Alvin Bernard Allen, 37, 6242 Clay st. he.

In a similar case last week, court attendants said, Fennell ordered a man who had not attended the school to pay $200 and serve 60 days if he failed to pay the fine.

He Goes to Jail

Allen did not pay the fine yesterday and went to jail. He was arrested January 17 after his automobile struck a parked car in front of 507 3d st. sw. He pleaded guilty and agreed to attend the school. He was graduated with a mark of 85.

Judge Refuses to Oust Action Against Union

Baltimore, Feb. 16 (AP).—Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut today overruled a defense motion to dismiss a $90,000 damage suit brought by a Hagerstown furniture factory against a CIO union.

The suit was by the Colonial Hardwood Flooring Co. against the International Union of United Furniture Workers of America and its Hagerstown local.

It charged the union violated the Taft-Hartley Act and a contract by illegally calling a strike at the Hagerstown plant last October 3.

In asking dismissal, the union argued the International could not be sued here and that the company should have tried to arbitrate.

Ice-Choked Potomac Perils Dwellings Along Its Banks

later, another observer reported the level had gone up to 35 feet above normal.

Park Police said the danger would become increasingly acute as high tide came in last night. Peak tide was due at 12:59 a. m.

Debris Swirls Downstream

This large chunk of ice carried along with it many smaller pieces of ice. The mixture of ice, muddy water, tree branches and other debris swirled downstream.

At this point there was a channel of clear water about 90 feet in width from the bank where the Potomac Boat Club is located. It continued for about 300 feet upstream from the bridge.

Downstream from Key Bridge the ice jam extended about a third of a mile. There it broke off in a jagged edge on the District side. However, the jam continued alongside the north side of Roosevelt Island.

The Potomac Boat Club moved all of its valuable equipment to the top floor in the face of the flood threat. A small winter float in front of the boathouse had been ripped loose by the ice. The ice, 6 to 8 inches thick, piled up beneath the float and tore it from the shore.

Dangerously High

Bennett Swenson, chief of the River Service Section of the Weather Bureau, said the river was dangerously high at Three Sisters Island, about a half mile above Key Bridge.

He said a flood crest was coming down stream from Harpers Ferry, W. Va., where the Potomac and the Shenendoah Rivers meet, and might complicate the already serious situation here. The flood crest from upstream was expected sometime during the night.

$7000 Worth Of Jewelry All Safe

"Recovered," "returned" and "no loss by larceny" all meant that Mrs. Grace Kanode Llewellyn yesterday had her $7000 worth of jewelry back.

The former assistant prosecutor in the Tokyo war crimes trials brushed off further questioning of her own report to police that the jewelry was missing after a house party Friday at her apartment, 2800 Woodley rd. nw.

Police marked down their official version of "no loss by larceny," they explained, when Mrs. Llewellyn "indicated" she found her five rings in a bag in a closet of her apartment yesterday.

Mrs. Llewellyn first told a reporter the rings had been "recovered;" amended this to "returned" when asked how it happened that neither she nor police had been able to find them in separate searches of the apartment, and ended up with "no comment" when pressed for details.

In Arlington

School Issue Referendum In Prospect

By Donald Olesen
Post Reporter

State Senator Charles R. Fenwick yesterday said he will introduce a bill to let Arlington residents approve or reject the holding of separate, nonpartisan school board elections.

This measure, he said, will be introduced in the State Senate "probably sometime this week."

At the same time, Delegate George Damm said he would introduce similar legislation in the House of Delegates if and when the Senate bill is launched.

It would call for school elections —with no participation by political parties—to be held in May. Such elections now are held in November and are open to candidates of both political parties.

Quick Opposition Arises

Fenwick's announcement drew quick opposition from T. Oscar Smith, chairman of Arlington's Joint Legislative Committee, which claims to represent 17 county civic groups. The committee is urging a bill that would make both school and County board elections nonpartisan, with both held in November. In addition, their proposal would set up "nonpartisan primaries" before November elections to eliminate all but two candidates for each school and county board post.

Committee Chairman Smith's opposition to the Fenwick bill was twofold. Smith felt that:

1. Because the County Board "controls the purse strings" of the School Board, both elections should be held simultaneously to allow "those interested in good schools to follow through" their school vote.

2. Separation of County Board and School elections would make it easier for Arlington's "political machine" to concentrate on the School campaign, and keep the number of independent voters down.

Fenwick Questions Legality

Both Senator Fenwick and Delegate Damm said they will not introduce the Joint Legislative Committee's bill for simultaneous, nonpartisan primaries for both boards.

Fenwick said he believed the bill is unconstitutional. He said holding of elimination elections in August would violate Section 112 of the Virginia Constitution, which says all general elections must be held in November.

The bill also violates Section 32 of the Constitution, Fenwick said. This section declares that any qualified person may run in Fall County Board elections, and "their bill would eliminate all but two."

Answering the unconstitutional charge, Smith pointed out that Norfolk and Suffolk have long had nonpartisan elections, and that the recently passed Richmond Charter Bill included nonpartisan provisions.

Back of the fight of certain county groups to keep political parties out of local elections is a long, drawn out history—and an uncertain future.

In 1931, Republicans held their first convention to nominate candidates to the County Board. Before the next election, Democrats followed suit with a County Board primary. But the Federal Hatch Act, as amended in 1940, prohibited Civil Service employes from being candidates in partisan local elections, except as independents.

In 1945, when Arlington sought enabling legislation for a city charter, the Board of Trade, Arlington Civic Federation and other groups asked that provisions for nonpolitical election of city councilmen be inserted. Although the legislation was passed in Richmond, the clause they asked was dropped.

The nonpartisan issue came to a head again in the 1946 election for the County Board, when Independent Daniel A. Dugan ran against incumbent Edmund Campbell, the Democrat's candidate. Dugan won in a major political upset.

In last fall's elections for the County Board—and for the first elected School Board—both Democrats and Republicans, by mutual consent, failed to back candidates for either body.

Senator Smith Backs Hawkes' Opponent

Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.) announced last night he will support Robert C. Hendrickson for the United States Senate.

School Board In Arlington Faces New Suit

An Arlington County Circuit Court ruling, upholding legality of the county's newly elected school board, will be appealed to the Supreme Court of Virginia, it was announced yesterday.

Attorneys for the old school board said they would carry their suit to the higher court in an effort to obtain reversal of a decision handed down by Judge J. Garland Jefferson on January 5, when he ruled constitutional the State law under which the new school board was elected last November.

Harry W. Porter, a member of the old board, who instituted the proceedings designed to invalidate the new board, said the appeal would be based on the contention that Judge Jefferson erred in his general interpretation of the law under which the school board election was held. He said it would be "filed as soon as all necsary recordes can be compiled," but pointed out that March is the deadline for noting an appeal from the January 5 decision.

The suit will be filed by George E. Allen, Richmond attorney, and will have the full support of all the old board's members "inasmuch as we all agreed to abide by whatever decision our attorneys made," Porter said.

Pending hearing of the appeal, the new popularly elected school board will retain control of the school administration, since State law provides that the first court decision shall remain in effect unless reversed by a higher court.

Chest Proposal Suits Council of Social Agencies

Unanimous approval of the proposed organization of the United Community Services of Washington came yesterday from the Council of Social Agencies.

The delegate body of the council met at noon yesterday to hear members of a special committee explain provisions of the proposed UCS, which in effect reorganized the Community Chest of Washington and the Council of Social Agencies.

The plan is expected to be set in motion if the Community Chest board of trustees, which meets Friday in the U. S. Chamber of Commerce Building, also votes approval.

In this event an interim committee of 14 members, seven each from the Chest and Council, will take steps necessary to set up the organization.

As proposed, the reorganization will bolster representation in welfare activities by city-wide organizations; give Washington citizens a voice in deciding what welfare projects are to be undertaken; and enlist community support for public welfare needs.

Mrs. Lois Parsons, a member of the committee which helped work out the plan, told those at the council meeting yesterday that the committee felt "that the proposed plan fulfilled the needs for which the plan was made." She added that the organization as proposed should have representative membership or face the danger of becoming the tool of groups with special interests.

Dr. Howard Long, a member of the board of directors of the council, said he wanted it understood that the council was not indorsing the removal of any agency from community affairs.

Edward G. Kemp, chairman of the council committee, said, "I realize certain features of the new plan may disappoint some of our members. Compromises are never entirely satisfactory. They necessarily involve concessions to a united effort."

Gandhi Voice Heard Again At Archives

The voice of Mohandas K. Gandhi, assassinated Indian leader, was heard again yesterday at the National Archives here.

A recording made last March when Gandhi was attending an Inter-Asia Relations Conference at New Delhi was formally presented to the Archives by Alfred Wagg, Asia correspondent for the Mutual Broadcasting System, before a throng of notables including the Indian Ambassador and newly arrived Minister to the United States.

Wagg explained that the recording was made in a huge open field. Audible were voices of some of the throng of 10,000 persons who heard Gandhi speak at that time.

At one point in the recording, there is a clapping of hands, which Gandhi stilled with: "I want to capture your hearts, not to hear your claps. If your hearts will clap in unison with what I say, I think I shall have finished my work."

Gandhi told his listeners that the carnage which raged then in India, was not the real India. "The real India is a message of peace for Asia, a message of love and truth."

School Site Row Reviewed By Two Sides

By Martha Hall
Post Reporter

Both sides in the controversy over a new school for North Fairlington yesterday appeared to be playing a waiting game.

A spokesman for Fairmac Corp., owners of the giant development, said William A. Ziegler, manager, discussed the matter with Arlington school representatives in November.

The discussion, according to the spokesman, was "an informal and exploratory conference."

"Mr. Ziegler assumed the school board would come back with a definite proposition, but we have not heard anything from them since," the spokesman, Charles E. V. Prins, Fairmac public relations representative, said.

Had Not Taken Over

Prins said Ziegler, who was also manager of the project when it was under control of Defense Home Corp., had not officially taken over for Fairmac at the time of the conference.

The 3500-home development changed hands on October 10, 1947, and Ziegler's resignation from DHC to take the Fairmac job became effective October 31, according to announcements made at the time.

After examining the results of a poll of residents in Fairlington, the Arlington school board authorized School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp to acquire a school site on October 25.

Kemp yesterday said that he had discussed the matter with Ziegler in a telephone conversation late in November and that at that time Ziegler had been announced publicly as Fairmac manager.

Conference Not Yet Held

Ziegler told them, Kemp said, that the school site matter should be taken up with Fairmac owners and that he (Ziegler) would arrange a conference as soon as the owners came to town.

"We have heard nothing since," Kemp said yesterday. He added he had called Ziegler once since November about the school but that Ziegler was out.

Defense Homes, Inc., meanwhile, disclosed that its records showed a plot of 4 acres at Abingdon st., near 30th st. S., had been designated on the plat for school construction. The office of the DHC general counsel said, however, the land was never deeded to the county for such construction.

Superintendent Kemp said Paul Brown, assistant Commonwealth's attorney, has been delegated to look into the matter.

Runs Are Cut On Seven Routes By Capital Transit

Continuing a program of curtailing some service in order to reduce expenses, the Capital Transit Co. yesterday cut the number of runs on seven routes, the District Public Utilities Commission said.

The routes affected were M-4, the Nebraska ave. line; D-6, the Loughboro-Chevy Chase line; D-1, 2, 3, and 4, which travel in the Glover Park-Trinidad area, and B-2, Bladensburg rd. line.

The PUC permitted the service reduction without hearings since the new schedule was above the Commission-set minimum standards for the routes.

The PUC will hold an informal public hearing tomorrow at 10 a. m. on a request by the W.M.&A. Motor Lines to reroute present bus travel to Bradbury Heights.

Firm Wins Right To Sue Employes For Strike Losses

Philadelphia, Feb. 16 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals ruled today that owners of wartime plants who suffered losses in strikes called prior to the 30-day "cooling-off" period can collect damages from employes.

The Circuit Court's decision reversed a decision of United States District Judge Harry E. Kalodner dismissing a suit against three employes of the France Packing Co., Philadelphia, in October, 1946. The higher court ordered the suit reinstated.

France Packing Co., which manufactured metallic packing for the armed forces, based its suit on the calling of a strike by the International Association of Machinists (AFL) one week after filing notice of its intention to strike within 30 days. The 30-day cooling-off period is specified in the Smith-Connally Act.

The firm's suit asked $20,000 damages from Thomas F. Dailey, shop steward; Edward J. Brown and Louis W. Kober, both shop committeemen.

Leap Year Etiquette

Gals Will Do the Stagging When Society Stages Sulgrave Club Dance

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

WASHINGTON'S more up-and-coming females are busier than bees and bird dogs, whipping up a super-duper Leap Year Dance. It's to be at the Sulgrave Club on the twenty-eighth, and elegantly complete with Meyer Davis music, champagne and scotch thrown in with the ticket. The approach to the party is wonderfully uninhibited.

The committee ladies, who have spent so many agitated hours sleuthing for extra gents, are reversing the process, tracking down unattached gals. No male may come unless escorted by two ladies and dinner hostesses are requested to invite a spate of ladies in order to insure their masculine guests a good time!

There will be a "doe" line instead of a stag line and, in order to prevent does from getting "stuck," there's to be a floor committee, each member made easily discernable by a white carnation corsage, who will handle "problem" men.

At a flick of a thumb, they'll rush relief—in other words—introduce another lady to the sturdy wallflower.

Leap Year Etiquette

LEAP YEAR ETIQUETTE includes an obligation for each lady to bunch her man with a boutonniere—vegetables, sunflowers, cacti or equally appropriate flora.

The gents will have to remember (a) the ladies will chase drinks for them, (b) ask them to sit out, (c) see them home.

Meanwhile the committee wants to settle two urgent problems. First, no out-of-town men can be brought along—there are too many in the home paddock. Second, not all the extra ladies invited can be included in the various dinners being given.

So a "Doe Dinner" is being arranged. Any female who has received an invitation, but has no preparty date will please call the committee secretary, Mrs. Skewes-Cox, at Decatur 8636.

The committee responsible for all this projected fun consists of Mrs. Eugene Carusi, Mrs. J. William Fulbright, Mrs. Arthur Gardner, Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin, jr.; Mrs. W. Averell Harriman, Mrs. Arthur Krock and Mrs. James W. Wadsworth.

Distinguished Visitor

PAUL VAN ZEELAND, Belgium's former Prime Minister, was one of the weekend's more stimulating visitors. Efficient Mr. van Zeeland who has successfully combined politics with grand style finance, came to town to be "complimented" by President Truman for his work with the Committee of "Good Offices" in the Netherlands East Indies.

VAN ZEELAND

The commission's makeup, in addition to the former Prime Minister, includes an Australian and an American, and they have spent some three months in an on-the-spot investigation of East Indies problems.

Internationally minded Paul Van Zeeland, who was also a former president of the big-business Societe Generale de Belgique, has a number of handsome roofs to cover his auburn head. He maintains several properties in Belgium, a New York apartment, and a country place in New Jersey where gentle, charming Mme. van Zeeland has been staying this past winter.

Training Social Secretaries

MANY OF WASHINGTON'S numerous embassies are on the alert for expert social secretaries. Well trained ladies to fill this particular bill are harder to find than pink pearls in gray oysters.

But come April, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth hopes to relieve the crisis. She is planning a training course for would-be embassy secretaries. Mrs. W. will only take four at a time, and a girl with the right qualifications should pick up the complicated tricks of the trade agreeable in 10 lessons.

An applicant for this very special job must be what is nebulously termed a "lady"—she must have a pleasant voice, a nice family background, a good handwriting and, above all, practically a saintly disposition. A language or two helps and good looks are no detriment. The pay is good, the surroundings happy.

Dodette Wyeth has been asked so often to recommend embassy secretaries that finally she determined to train girls herself. She is Washington's most successful embassy secretary and right now helps the French Embassy's Mme. Bonnet mornings, the Brazilian Embassy's Mme. Martins afternoons. But when the Martins leave for Paris in April, she will devote this time to giving lessons.

Started in Hoover Regime

LIKE MOST JOBS, Mrs. Wyeth got hers entirely by accident. Born in Cincinnati, she went to boarding school in France and Germany, lived abroad 10 years of her married life.

MRS. WYETH

Back in Washington during the Hoover regime, the crack social secretary of the era, Mrs. Mandeville Argyle, asked Dodette if she would be secretary to Mrs. William de Witt Mitchell, wife of the Attorney General. She did, then moved on to the Charles Francis Adams, to the William Phillips, when Mr. P. was Undersecretary of State.

Mrs. Wyeth is in the telephone book, and anyone interested can write her, in their best script, for an interview.

Paul, auxiliary president, and Mrs. Joseph S. Stern, first vice president

Miss MacDonald and her husband, Gene Raymond, who was at the party, have often visited Mrs. Willebrandt at her ranch Walker Sands, near Palm Springs, Calif.

Mrs. Verbena Hebbard of Beverley Hills, had a few friends in for dinner before Miss MacDonald's concert, and later took her guests on to Mrs. Willebrandt's party. At the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. Peter Rathvon of Beverley Hills, Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Palmers of New York City, and others.

Modern Woman Letting Down The Pioneers, Says Rep. Dorn

"American women can exert a much greater influence on national, international, as well as local and State affairs, if only they will participate more actively," Representative William Jennings Bryan Dorn told members of the Democratic Women's National Council in a speech last night.

The South Carolina bachelor Representative said that women need not neglect their household duties and families in order to take a lively interest in outside affairs. "In fact, I have observed that the best run and most attractive homes seem to be those headed by women who vote and participate in political and civic affairs."

Dorn excoriated the women for not utilizing their ballot. "Women have had suffrage for 27 years, but have not accomplished the things the pioneer suffragettes predicted," he declared, adding, "but it is not the fault of the pioneers. The modern women are letting them down."

Referring to the split in the Democratic Party, the speaker said that there is enough middle ground for all factions to come together on such basic measures as security, national defense, and such progressive legislation as social security, education and soil conservation.

Italy Works, Ambassador's Wife Reports

By Genevieve Reynolds

"Italians were working day and night. Their will to work was the best thing I found when I returned to my homeland for the first time in 20 years last fall." So declared Signora Tarchiani, wife of the Italian Ambassador, in an informal luncheon address yesterday at the Woman's National Democratic Club, 1526 New Hampshire ave., nw.

Pointing out that the Italians are philosophical people, Signora Tarchiani said they take the attitude nothing lasts forever and try to forget the current hardships. "Italy is not looking to the past but to the future," she explained.

She told how the women again are making fine linens, silks, leather goods and bags from tortoise shells. But such products, she expensive for the Italian people to purchase for themselves.

No Luxuries

"My impression is that the Italian people have returned to truth," said are too expensive for the Italian people to purchase for themselves.

Citing her own family as an example, she described how the former, rich and distinguished families skimp along on the bare necessities without any surpluses for luxuries. She recalled how she bought a pair of simple, white sandals for one of her nieces. "Her father could not afford to pay 6,000 lira for the shoes," she explained.

On the surface the Italians try to keep up an appearance, but behind the scenes live very frugally. When in Genoa, Signora Tarchiani during the first week of her visit, found no water to wash her face. But the next week it rained, and the household c[illegible]ted water in the cistern on top of the house, so there was plenty for a bath.

Mrs. Oscar Cox, program chairman, introduced the speaker, and Mrs. Paul Porter presided, in the absence of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, club president.

Fathers Tell About First Year's Bills

Just How Much Does a Baby Cost?

"LOSS of sleep, disrupted plans, worry and some cash, but our baby is the biggest 'bargain' in life. Just subtract the $600 he cost from the million he's worth and we are richer by $999,400."

That comment on baby and the budget came from a father during a discussion of what a baby costs during his first year.

Another father said: "I confess that there is something fearsome and inflexible in the cumulative cost of our son, but when I recall that these expenses were met fractionally as they arose, they are not so awesome as they, at first glance, appear. Then, too, the Government lets us deduct a full $500 for the dent he hammers into the family budget."

A survey of the figures submitted by fathers shows that what your baby will cost depends upon whether the mother and baby have good health, where you live, what you are given, what you can borrow, what you think the baby must have, what you can afford.

In most families, the biggest item of expense was medical care. Reported under this heading were the obstetrician's fees, hospital bill, pediatrician's fees and the bill at the drugstore.

Prenatal care and delivery costs ranged from $40 to $500. Seventy-five dollars to $150 were figures most frequently mentioned.

One father who had failed to discuss the fee with the obstetrician advised fathers to take this matter up with the doctor early in the pregnancy, so that they could change doctors if the fee could not be adjusted to the family income.

Hospital costs ran from 50 cents to $475. Hospital care insurance accounted for the lowest cost; complications requiring surgery, blood transfusions and special nurses, the highest. Fifty per cent of the families reported carrying some type of hospital or medical insurance. Several who had not carried health insurance regretted it, and advised prospective parents to have it.

Monthly supervision of well babies was the most frequently mentioned basic medical cost during the baby's first year. Inoculations and vaccinations were added to this figure along with the expenses incurred by illness.

The druggist got between $15 and $25 a year from most fathers. Itemized accounts listed everything from absorbent cotton to special prescriptions for both mother and child.

Equipment Costly

EQUIPMENT to care for the baby and food for the year rivaled each other for the second largest piece of father's income. Equipment costs ran especially high if the family purchased a new automatic washer. Eighteen per cent of the families reported buying these to lighten the laundry load that the baby brings.

Total expenditure for equipment ran from $45 to $509.27. The low was possible because much was loaned by understanding friends or given by doting relatives. Cribs, carriages, play pens, high chairs and bathinettes seem to be standard equipment for the modern baby, but in many families these were gifts, loans or purchased second hand.

"Don't buy sheets and blankets until you know how many you get as gifts," advises one experienced father. "Don't buy a bassinette. Baby outgrows it too quickly. You'll save money by putting him in a crib right away," contributed a second.

Advice on Layettes

ON layette purchases fathers gave sage advice on keeping them to a minimum until the flow of gifts has ended. Buy these, they advise, in 1-year sizes so that you won't have to make replacements before the first birthday. From $12 to $100 was spent on the initial layette. From $10 to $100 more was spent for additional clothes during the first year. Shoes and winter clothes were the most expensive items. Mothers who sewed saved money by making baby's suits, rompers and play suits from old house dresses and discarded shirts.

Fathers didn't agree about the worth of hand-me-downs. One said, "The cost of clothing goes up as baby No. 1 grows. Not so with baby No. 2. We retint the faded blue pants and pray that the shirts will receive a new series of trips to the washing machine."

Major Item

BABY'S LAUNDRY was the most important item in adding to the cost of household operation in most families. If the laundry was done at home, bills went up for electricity and gas to run the washer and heat the water. If the laundry was sent out, the diaper service and the laundry bills were additional items of expense.

The cost of feeding baby the first year ran from $2.50 to $7 a week. Breast feeding was reported to cost less than bottle feeding unless the additional milk in the mother's diet was included in the budget. Formulas of evaporated milk and cane sugar cost less than the special milks and dextri-maltose prescribed by doctors for some of the babies. (Goat's milk cost 35 cents a day.) A few babies were given special dietary extras such as calcium powder and Vitamin B concentrates.

Father Helps

COST OF HELP to run the house and take care of one child at home while mother went to the hospital to have the second one was a major item of expense added to the cost of having a second baby. Some of the fathers took their vacations during this time and acquired a great respect for mother's job in the home!

Remarks of fathers under "household operations" were interesting.

Said one: "The amount of damage an active child can do between the ages of 6 and 18 months is astonishing. Rugs had to be washed after the babies puddle them. Panes of glass had to be replaced, mute testimony to small fry's marksmanship. My wife's glasses had to be replaced after our 9-months-old gleefully hurled them on the tiled floor."

Regular saving before the baby is born, to pay the first expenses, is a practice recommended by many parents—some who did it and others who wished they had. Twenty per cent of the parents reported that they cut into savings to pay the cost of the baby. Eighteen per cent said they were beginning to save now that they had the baby. Fifty per cent carried insurance.

In less than one year the stork brought them TWO sets of bouncing twins: Patricia and Pamela Ann (in the high chairs) and Donna Jean and Donna Jane (inset). They live in a three-room efficiency apartment which is shared by an aunt. Mr. Sherwood's salary of $41 per week must be stretched to cover, among other things, 160 diapers a week

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman, Desirous That Younger Sister Shall Be Happy in Second Marriage After Previous Bad Break, Asks Appraisal of Present Fiance

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am writing in the interest of my younger sister who lives with me and whom I love dearly. She is 28 years of age and is engaged to a man 10 years her senior.

Edith, my sister, divorced her husband eight years ago and I don't think she ever expected to become interested in anyone else again, as her first marriage was an unhappy one.

However, when Tom, an old friend, came along, they began to find great pleasure in each other's company and now they are planning a summer wedding. They are very much in love and, I would say, are "made for each other."

Tom is a widower, a warm-hearted generous person whom everyone likes. His only fault, if one may call it that, is being too accommodating—and so he is imposed upon, to an extent. He is particularly gallant to the opposite sex and they are quick to take advantage of it.

Widow, Old Friend, Still Holds to Him

IN TOM'S part of town there lives a widow, who, I think, Tom has known for many years and I understand that even now he is a frequent caller at her home. I believe she encourages his coming, for I once heard him say that she liked to see him, which made it hard for him to say "no."

It seems to me that in the circumstances, being engaged to Edith, it would be better for him not to see so much of the widow; or am I being old-fashioned? Edith gives Tom a perfect devotion and trust and I am wondering if this perfect love of hers is great enough to protect Tom, supposing he needs protection.

I feel that from the wordly point of view there must be some way for Edith to out-maneuver this possible rival, since Tom means everything to her. I have always thought it better to rout the enemy rather than to surrender the field. Please let me know what you think, as I am desirous that Edith shall be happy this time.

Beware the Flirt And Alibi Artist

DEAR T. S.: Dr. Clifford S. Adams, offering wide range of sensible counsel on "How to Pick a Mate," in his textbook of that title, devotes a chapter to "nine dangerous characters," whom persons bent on happy marriage are warned to by-pass.

One of these characters is "the flirt," another the "alibi artist,"—and qualities of each will be found in the man who is so gallant and accommodating, or call it so vulnerable, to the opposite sex that he can't establish his attention on one and tell others, in effect, to go fly their kites.

If it's true that Tom, though engaged to Edith, still sees much of the widow and gives as reason that she wants him to call and he can't say "no" lest he hurt her feelings, then he certainly stacks up as an alibi artist, in the sense of rationalizing or trying to excuse conduct he feels defensive about.

Bride of Weakling Marries Heartache

SAYS Dr. Adams: "If one sees in the other during courtship indications that excuse-making is an ingrained habit . . . break off the courtship and seek a mate elsewhere. That may sound like a harsh way to deal with the purveyor of 'little white lies' but it has been clearly established that such a person is a very bad marriage risk."

The bride of the flirt or alibi artist is marrying trouble inherent in his nature, and she will find him shallow, subtly selfish and elusively resistant to reform; a chap devoid of desire to grow up, a spouse with whom she can't develop honest cooperation or bedrock understanding on the vital points of personal relationship.

Thus as to whether, from the worldly viewpoint, there is some way for Edith to circumvent the widow, assuming she is a fixed contender for Tom's attentions and he more amiable than honorable in his dealings with women,—I should say the game isn't worth the candle for Edith. If obliged to ride herd on Tom's vulnerability to keep him more or less out of the widow's hands, she would wind up with self-respect so battered and bruised that she couldn't be happy with what she defends.

Women Revive Home Sewing, Knitting Fads

By Peggy Preston

ACCORDING to statistics we are turning into a nation of seamstresses.

Pattern sales zoomed from 60 million a year, prewar, to 167 million in 1947, women spending more than 50 millions last year for the little pieces of tissue paper they use as guides in making their clothes. It is estimated that 23 million women engage in home sewing activities, of which at least 25 per cent are teen-agers. More than a million spent about eight million dollars in 1947 learning how to sew in classes and clinics.

In fact, it would appear that in feminine circles, home sewing has become the Nation's No. 1 hobby. Maybe it is the mood of the Nation, a sentimental one that is reflected in our choice of feminine, romantic fashions; and in our delight in revivals of old tunes and melodies. Again, it may be that women are returning to their sewing baskets in an effort to outwit high prices.

At any rate, their efforts will be spotlighted next week with the tenth annual observance of National Sew and Save Week, February 21 to 28.

Two local department stores are staging special events today and tomorrow that are significant in the light of next week's observance. On Wednesday, at Lansburgh's, there will be a fashion show featuring costumes made from Simplicity Patterns, with Miss Nina Nix, stylist for the firm, as commentator. Hours for the showing are 11:30 a. m. and 2:30 p. m.

Miss Mildred Handley, McCall stylist, will be at Woodward & Lothrop's today and tomorrow to conduct educational talks on "Ways With Wool." She will speak in the fabric department at 11 a. m. and 3 p. m. daily.

Techniques with wool will be explained in four steps: 1, correct selection of design for the fabric of your choice; 2, preparation of your fabric and adjustment of the pattern before cutting; 3, actual cutting and fitting; 4, professional finishing methods.

GRANDMOTHERS and teen-agers have found something in common—the knitting bug.

The pride of saying "I made it myself," is catching on among the "Under 20" set and one of their current fads is to knit sweaters for evening wear from hairpin lace or ribbon. Knitted, crochet and hairpin lace accessories were popular around the turn of the century when Grandma was a girl. Another recent revival, popular when grandpop was in college, is the knit blazer. Youngsters of today are knitting jaunty striped ones for the boys to whom they are "pinned."

An exhibition of work at the Knitting and Handcraft Center the week of February 23 will be of interest to both old and young knitting enthusiasts. Miss Sonna Noble knitting instructor at the center, has arranged for a showing of dolls' clothing and flags in which every type of stitch will be shown.

On the dolls will be children's and women's knitted garments which students at the center designed and executed. One unusual outfit is a nun's complete garb.

The flags, also the work of students, have been executed in a variety of stitches. Included is the afgan stitch, maltese lace (old-fashioned hairpin lace), crochet, needle point and Quaker Canvas work.

"Let me see, how many pork chops will I need?"

Actually, this shopper bought her pork chops in her favorite retail store. But in doing so, she really did business with a distant farmer.

Meat packing companies and retail stores perform the services necessary to make transactions like these possible. They make available to the woman the meat she wants, when she wants it—anywhere she happens to live.

The 4,000 meat packers of the United States cannot determine how much meat there will be or for what it will sell. Their job is to buy what the livestock raisers offer for sale, turn it into meat, and deliver it to the store where you shop.

For its services the meat packers' profit, after paying all expenses, averages only a fraction of a cent a pound—and meat prices always are established by the demand for the available supply of meat.

AMERICAN MEAT INSTITUTE
Headquarters, Chicago • Members throughout the U. S.

Price on the hoof. The price a meat packer can pay the farmer for his hogs depends on the price he is offered for meat, lard and by-products.

Not all pork chops. Only one-third the weight of a hog is in the most-demanded cuts such as pork chops, ham, bacon. About 45% of the hog is lard, by-products and shrinkage.

Meat on the move. The average meat animal travels 432 miles to a meat packing plant, and the perishable meat is delivered, under refrigeration, a few blocks or 1,000 miles to reach a retailer's store.

Heads High Under New Bonnets

By Ida Jean Kain

If your new spring bonnet has gay ribbons on it, and ties under the chin . . . remember that only a baby looks cute with a double chin!

Why, oh, why must extra calories snuggle under the chin? Why couldn't they pad the collar bones instead? Reason it out . . . in turning your head you use the collar bone spot, and the spot under the chin makes a nice, soft parking place for fat. And when fat is added to soft muscles, the result is a double chin.

Do It Every Day

A bit of daily exercise will keep the muscles and the skin in tone so that they won't fall down on the job of holding the chin to a firm contour. Two things to do . . . use cream or warm oil first, and tense the muscles of the throat as you exercise. The skin can't absorb cream, but it keeps the skin soft, which wards off wrinkles. Tensing the throat muscles puts the exercise action smack on the muscle instead of stretching the skin.

So cream first, working the lubricants into the cushion of muscles which round the chin and jaw. The jawbone is covered by broad, flat, muscular bands that originate underneath the bone, extend upward an attach to the cheek bone. It's easy to see what happens when these muscles get lax. Our authority advises deep, firm rubbing along the jawline to tone the muscles that cushion the chin. Place tip of chin in heel of hand and press along the jawline in a firm, kneading action, working up toward the ear.

"Set" and Pull

The exercise technique is to "set" the jaw muscles and pull forcibly upward. Like this. . . . Open your mouth, "set" the lower jaw, and, resisting with lower jaw muscles, slowly close your mouth and continue the upward pull until the lower lip is thrust over the upper lip. Relax slowly and repeat slowly three times.

The thin sheet of muscle fibers called the platysma contracts the front line of the throat; it's this muscle that tends to become flabby and fat imbedded. To put the gimp back to that muscle, do this perker-upper. Lie on back on bed, head just off the edge of the bed. . . . Or place two pillows under your shoulders and let your head drop back. Then slowly raise head to chin level and lower slowly backward again. Three or four times will be enough.

Beauteous Marguerite Chapman, screen actress, shows steps to prevent chin troubles: massage in cream and hold head proudly. It should be added that she also says "no" to rich desserts

Honest, I Didn't Know

USED FATS WERE STILL BADLY NEEDED!

Lady, where have you been? Used fats are needed now more than ever, because the shortage of fats and oils today is the greatest in the world's history. Our government warns us that the supply simply cannot meet today's industrial needs. You can help prevent this supply from getting too low by continuing to turn in your used fats.

You say you re-use them for cooking! Fine! But even the drops left after that are worth salvaging. Then how about melting down fat trimmings, skimming gravies? Those tricks yield plenty!

And come to think of it, what other kitchen waste can you convert into good hard cash? It's a point to remember, these days of high food costs! You know, prices butchers pay for used fats are up, on the average. So please . . . don't throw your fats away. Save 'em, and turn 'em in!

Recently I purchased a pair of red rubber boots for my 6-year-old son, inasmuch as the store was out of black and brown. Now all the kids ridicule him at school, saying they are girl's boots. Please advise if they can be painted or dyed. R. D. H.

I'm afraid there isn't much you can do that would be permanent to change the color of the boots. However, there is a shop in Alexandria where they sell used clothing for their customers. I discussed your problem with the manager and she thinks she can work out a switch for you. Call her at Alexandria 0649.

Can a lame over-blouse be restored to its original luster? It was packed away and now it sticks together and some of the luster sheds when shaken out. L. S. A.

The luster of the blouse might be improved somewhat by sponging it with a soft cloth dampened with ammonia. It is doubtful, however, if this blouse will be wearable even if the luster is restored. Since it sheds when shaken, some of the connecting threads are probably broken or weakened so that the fabric would split readily when worn.

I lengthened a black crepe dress and used a damp cloth (on the underneath side) in pressing out the crease. This left it very shiny. Is there any way to restore the material to its former appearance? G. B. M.

Sponge the material with a dampened turkish towel (use one that doesn't shed), "roughing" up the surface a bit as you sponge. When material is almost dry, press the hem again through a fairly thin dry cloth and on a perfectly smooth, well-padded ironing board. Use a moderately hot iron and not too much pressure. Extra pressure in trying to get the crease out was probably partly responsible for the shine the material acquired.

Can you tell me what type of gifts are associated with the first 35 wedding anniversaries? I would really like to know 50, but don't wish to "hog" your column. E. R. M.

The list of anniversaries that I have gives one (sometimes two) types of gifts associated with every year up to 15, then one for every five years after that. Here it is: First, paper; second, calico or cotton; third, leather or muslin; fourth, silk; fifth, wood; sixth, iron; seventh, copper or woolen; eighth, electrical appliances; ninth, pottery; tenth, tin or aluminum; eleventh, steel; twelfth, linen; thirteenth, lace; fourteenth, ivory; fifteenth, crystal; twentieth, china; twenty-fifth, silver; thirtieth, pearls; thirty-fifth, coral and jade; fortieth, ruby; forty-fifth, sapphire; fiftieth, golden; fifty-fifth, emeralds; sixtieth, diamond; seventy-fifth, diamond also.

A member of my family has several coverlets which are now ready for quilting. Could you inform her of any individual or organization who can do the quilting either for a charge or for a charitable contribution. A. E. W.

We haven't the names of any persons or clubs that do this work on file. Perhaps some other reader can suggest someone.

Is there any place in the metropolitan area where I can have a wooden bathroom fixture propery refinished? The white enamel is peeling off and I do not feel that I can refinish it satisfactorily at home? H. N. C.

There doesn't seem to be any place here that makes a speciality of this work. However, new plastic fixtures of this type that last very well are reasonable now. Buying one might be more economical than having your old one refinished. It is true that home paint jobs on such fixtures often do not prove satisfactory. However, if the job is carefully done with good quality enamel, fair results should be obtained. It would be advisable to remove all the old enamel with paint and varnish remover first. Be sure to let the paint dry very thoroughly before returning the fixture to use.

Branch Bank Bill Advances In Va. House

Richmond, Va., Feb. 16 (AP).—The House of Delegates today advanced to its third reading the Virginia Bankers Association bill to restrict branch banking. The vote was 69 to 23.

With this action, the House also:

Adopted unanimously an amendment designed to secure the right of the Bank of Virginia (Morris Plan) to go ahead with branches already authorized by the State Corporation Commission.

Amendment Rejected

Rejected 54 to 39 an amendment to freeze all branch banks, other than those now authorized, for a two-year period pending a study by the Virginia Advisory Legislative Council and the 1950 session.

Rejected by a voice vote an amendment which would permit the Bank of Virginia to expand in cities where it now operates branches on an equal basis with other banks.

The long, fiery banking debate overshadowed other events today in the Virginia General Assembly, which also saw:

2. The House pass the Senate bill setting up a Virginia bright flue-cured tobacco commission to promote the export of the leaf.

3. The House pass the Senate bill enabling localities to appropriate funds for hospital construction and obtain Federal funds under the Hill-Burton Act.

Dairy Bill Introduced

4. A dairyman's bill introduced in the House to require milk imported from out of the State to be Grade A pasteurized, and rewriting other phases of the State's laws regulating the production and distribution of milk.

The branch banking bill found the administration leaders divided among themselves and, from some cities, split delegations.

Delegate J. M. Magruder of Arlington, patron of the bill, moved to suspend the constitutional reading in an effort to complete House passage today. The move failed of the necessary majority and was rejected, 62 for and 30 against. Eighty votes for the suspension would have been necessary.

The preceding debate ranged from indorsement of unit banking and warnings of a chain bank monopoly to an assertion by Delegate Robert Whitehead of Nelson that the VBA bill would "stifle competition."

The debate raged back and forth on the floor, with some members refusing to yield to questions, as is customary. An identical banking bill is before the Senate which, however, may await action on the House bill. The House bill will be up tomorrow on its third and final reading.

Greyhound Garage Fined For Smoke

The Greyhound bus garage, 1345 New York ave. ne., was fined $200 in Municipal Court yesterday on four counts of creating a smoke nuisance.

The case, the second of its kind in two weeks, arose from complaints of Brentwood Village residents, said Chief Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King, who prosecuted.

King told Judge Nadine Lane Gallagher that the garage was notified of the violations in December, but an inspetcor recorded the four instances of excessive smoke on rechecking the plant between January 4 and 14.

James R. Spellman, garage superintendent, who pleaded guilty for the corporation, asid the firm is seeking a better grade of coal and that firemen have been instructed to keep the volume of smoke at a minimum. He said the smoke comes from heating two boilers that provide steam for cleaning buses.

The Washington Terminal Co., operator of Union Station, was fined $400 February 2 for excessive smoke issuing from two power plants.

Third Fugitive In Williamsburg Jail Break Caught

Providence Forge, Va., Feb. 16. (AP).—Police today recaptured William Brown, 16, the last of three prisoners who escaped yesterday afternoon from the Williamsburg jail.

Chief of Police W. H. Kelly and Sheriff V. W. Lovelace overtook Brown as he crossed a field near here. At the time, the two officers were bringing bac kanother of the escapees, Leonard Woodley.

The third escapee, Willie Walters, was fatally shot by Patrolman R. E. Berry shortly after the break yesterday afternoon near the Colonial Parkway tunnel. Berry, according to Chief Kelly, surprised the trio while they were seeking concealment in the tunnel. Walters was shot in the neck.

Woodley was apprehended last night at Charles City. All three were being held in the Williamsburg jail on charges of armed robbery lodged by New Kent County authorities.

The sentence, maximum for such an offense, was set by a jury and pronounced by Judge William P. Woolls.

Police charged Stokes, who lived at the Circle Terrace Hospital where he was employed, enticed an 8-year-old girl into the hospital basement January 16. He pleaded innocent.

Among those indicted by the grand jury was Edward T. Monroe, 38, 730 North Columbus st., who last month confessed, according to police to a series of nine safe crackings which netted him about $6000. V., on three counts of forgery.

Grand Jury Indicts 8 In Arlington

An Arlington County grand jury handed down 12 criminal indictments against eight persons yesterday at the opening of the February Circuit Court term.

The jury received 10 presentments, involving charges ranging from carrying a concealed weapon to seduction, and brought in true bills in all but two. Both indictments ignored by the panel involved felonious assault charges.

Indicted were Leon Mason, 29, of 2125 N st. nw., charged with grand larceny; John E. Toth, 20, of 2521 N. Glebe rd., felonious assault; William R. Davis, 25, of 608 S. Fillmore st., breaking and entering; Leon Dillard, 30, of 3458 S. 22d st., carrying concealed weapon; Utha Wilson, 28, of 808 S. 22d st., carrying a concealed weapon; Arthur L. Marcey, 21, Chesterbrook, Va., felonious assault; Guy H. Fuller, 19, address unknown, seduction, and Wendell Joppy, 23, of 1424 6th st. nw., breaking and entering.

All entered pleas of not guilty except Fuller, who is in custody of District police, and Joppy, who pleaded guilty to breaking into the Rucker Lumber Co. building on April 17, 1947. Joppy was sentenced to three years in prison by Judge Walter T. McCarthy.

Registration Set Today for Takoma Park

Takoma Park, Md., residents, who live in Prince Georges County, will be given an opportunity to register today to qualify for voting in the town election May 3.

The Prince Georges County board of election supervisors will sit from 5 to 9 p. m. in the election office at the Upper Maarboro courthouse to register the prospective voters. Town election laws require that voters in all town elections be registered as county voters.

Residents of the Montgomery County section of the town may go to Rockville on any business day and register with the permanent board of registration, but Prince Georges County has no such permanent board. The law requires the registration be held at Upper Marlboro.

Only persons who declared their intention of becoming Maryland citizens prior to November 2, 1947, or persons who will have reached their majority before November 2, 1948, while living in the State and are not, therefore, required to declare intentions, will be eligible to register.

Falls Church Votes Today On Water Plan

Fate of a proposed one-million-dollar water expansion program in Falls Church, Va., will be in the hands of the town's qualified voters today.

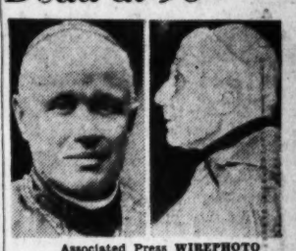
Ballots will be cast from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. in a referendum by which the electorate can approve or reject a proposal to float a bond issue for the project. The bonds, if approved, would be paid off over a 35-year period.

The election, under terms of the town charter, is the second centering on the bond issue. An earlier referendum of the town's resident landowners brought overwhelming approval of the proposal, and paved the way for today's balloting.

Town officials have advocated the bond issue as the only means of solving a critical water shortage. The previous landowners' election is generally accepted as a fairly accurate indication of the outcome of today's balloting.

In the event the bonds are approved, they will be used to construct a water line linking the present town water system with the main source of supply from the District's Dalecarlia water works.

Rome's Dean Of Cardinals Dead at 96



Associated Press WIREPHOTO
Dean of the College of Cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church is Francesco Cardinal Marchetti-Selvaggiani (left), upon the death of Gennero Cardinal Granito Pignatelli yesterday. Enrico Cardinal Sibilia (right), next in line of succession, may take over the position, according to Vatican authorities, because Cardinal Marchetti-Selvaggiani's health may not permit him to do so Vatican City, Feb. 16 (AP).—Genarro Cardinal Granito Ignatelli di Belmonte, 96-year-old dean of the College of Cardinals who knew five Popes, died today.

Services will be held Thursday. Vatican sources said Pope Pius XII will read the centuries-old absolution for the dead, an almost unprecedented respect, because of their long association.

A definite answer to the question of who will succeed to the deanship of the princes of the church was not known. The 77-year-old Francesco Cardinal Marchetti-Selvaggiani, who would become dean by order of precedence, was reported ill.

Next in line among the 60 remaining cardinals is Enrico Cardinal Sibilia, 87.

Those present at Pignatelli's deathbed said he emerged from a 12-hour coma this morning while Msgr. Dante was at his side. Jokingly he asked if Msgr. Dante had come "to make arrangements for my burial."

The cardinal, as Prince of Belmonte, was a member of the Italian aristocracy. As Count of Copertino he held a place in the society of his native Naples before many of his brother cardinals were born.

Empire Report Up for Action

The special five-man committee seeking the cause of the partial collapse of the Empire Building will meet today at 10 a. m. in the office of District Director of Inspections Robert H. Davis, Committee Chairman Stewart Beall said last night.

Members of the group have been studying a preliminary draft of the committee report on the collapse causes and are expected to complete action today. The report, after various exhibits are completed, will then be sent to the District Commissioners, Beall said.

Four persons were killed and 12 injured when a part of the seven-story building at New York ave. and 9th st. nw. collapsed December 16.

A Lesson From Dublin

Gate Troupe Can Give Us Notions

By Richard L. Coe

DUBLIN, which, as any stamp collector can tell you, is the capital of Eire, has a population of only half a million, but it supports two resident theatrical companies as well as a procession of traveling players.

The 50-year-old Abbey is the more famous of these theatrical twins, but the 20-year-old GATE has been doing fine. The GATE is now in New York on a brief tour of America, but, needless to say, it will NOT be coming to Washington.

Which is too bad, for the Capital of these United States has something to learn from the capital of the Irish Free State. The company is not spectacularly brilliant, but it is a good, solid troupe of actors, and the parts, from leads to bits, are expertly played.

For its American tour the GATE is doing four plays, Shaw's "John Bull's Other Island", Denis Johnston's "The Old Lady Says No!" and two comedies by the company's codirector, Michael MacLiammoir, "Where the Stars Walk" and "Portrait of Miriam." The Johnston comedy is the current bill at New York's Mansfield Theater, for which George Jean Nathan is currently advising his readers, "tickets should be worth $300 apiece."

"John Bull's Other Island," which will return to the players' New York repertory March 2, final week of their season, is a Bernard Shaw comedy that has only been given once before in this country, and that was over 40 years ago. While, as the phrase has it, it is dated, it remains an exuberant dish of Shaviana and at moments seems strikingly timely.

Shaw Spoofs His Countrymen

For in it Shaw is picturing John Bull's traditional attitude toward his, er, satellites. A British engineer goes to Ireland bent an cleaning up a fortune through public improvements. His Irish-born partner goes along, too, warning his pal that an Irishman's greatest happiness is his hopeless passion for dreaming. The engineer very quickly stands for Parliament and is accepted by the neighborhood's eligible heiress, who, by the way, has been waiting 18 years for his partner to come back and marry her.

As you have guessed, Shaw doesn't limit his sardonic humor to the bumbling, stuffy Englishman who's his hero. His portraits of the Irish make his own countrymen equally rediculous. Though Shaw has seldom been one to restrain himself in superfluity of writing, everything he has to say, from comments on religion to farming, remains considerably more amusing than what practically anyone else has written before or since.

The playing is immensely assured. Hilton Edwards, who founded the company with MacLiammoir, directs most of the plays and acts the lead in the Shaw. There are some outstanding bits which suggest that in their other vehicles the players will reveal the versatility which springs from a well-regulated repertory system.

For Washington to support such a company as Dublin does, is, of course, a much more difficult matter, for our salaries and production costs are far higher than in the Irish capital. The fact remains, however, that 18 players are working effectively together. And their settings, which consist largely of backdrops with painted-on furniture, didn't disturb any of the audience so far as we could see. Such intelligent simplicity is one way of licking the high costs the producers are shouting about.

AN UNUSUAL EVENING is planned for Thursday at Armstrong High School, where Carolyn Hill Stewart will offer a program of her one-woman dramatic excerpts. . . . Mrs. Stewart is a young actress who recently appeared in Robert Ardrey's "Jeb," and she has devised a program of dramatic highlights which include scenes from "Medea," "The Merchant of Venice," "The Country Life," "The School for Scandal," "Salome," "The Noose" and "Saint Joan," as well as a reading from Dorothy Parker's story, "Arrangement in Black and White." . . . A West Virginian, Mrs. Stewart went to Iowa State and was the first woman of her race to head a dominantly white cast for a major university play—that one was the role of Oparre in Maxwell Anderson's "Winged Victory." . . . The PT-A of the Visiting Instruction Corps and Omega Wives are sponsoring the Thursday performance and tickets may be reserved through Mrs. Boyd, ATlantic 6953, or Mrs. Barnes, ATlantic 5107.

Suburbs Seen Getting 77% Of Building

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington has reached about 75 per cent of the saturation point—that is, the level at which the city's area will be fully utilized in housing facilities.

McKelway

But don't start worrying yet. The city probably won't reach 100 per cent of saturation until about the year 2070.

That prediction was made last night by B. M. McKelway, editor of the Evening Star, in an address before 400 members and guests of the Electric Institute of Washington in the Mayflower.

McKelway expects that "as the population becomes more condensed, apartment houses will take the place of many single residences. We will begin going up toward the sky—or, perhaps more likely, burrowing down under the ground."

He emphasized the metropolitan area is growing much faster than the city itself. The expansion trend, he said, is indicated by Board of Trade figures showing that of 239 million dollars of new construction now planned or under way only 23 per cent is in the District of Columbia.

The remaining 77 per cent is allocated as follows: 23 per cent in Prince Georges, 21 per cent in Fairfax, 17 per cent in Montgomery, and 15.5 per cent in Arlington and Alexandria.

Another speaker was George E. Whitwell, vice president of the Philadelphia Electric Co., who outlined what the postwar electric period is likely to bring.

In the annual report of the Electric Institute, Manager Director William G. Hills estimated that total retail value of electric appliance sales in Washington amounted to about $20,455,000 in 1947. Unit sales of principal appliances compared as follows (1947 first, then 1946): ranges 4588 against 2578; refrigerators 16,764 against 11,403; ironers 2233 against 714; washers 19,960 against 9918; water heaters 3358 against 1699; radios 75,757 against 82,633; vacuum cleaners 9770 against 10,885; roasters 2036 against 1043.

FLEMING ELECTED: Robert V. Fleming, president and chairman of the Riggs National Bank, yesterday was elected second vice president of the Federal Advisory Council of the Federal Reserve System for 1948. Other officers chosen yesterday at a meeting in Chicago were: Howard E. Brown of Chicago, chairman; Charles E. Spencer of Boston, first vice president; director V. Randolph Burgess of [illegible] York, David E. Williams of [illegible] Philadelphia and John E. McCoy of [illegible] Columbus, Ohio.

EARNINGS: The net profits of the 6900 member banks in the Federal Reserve System fell 14 per cent last year, compared to 1946, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday. Net profits, which are figured after taxes, totaled 654 million dollars, a decrease of 104 million dollars from the previous year. As a group all member banks earned less on capital than during the previous year, 7.9 per cent in 1947 compared to 0.6 per cent in 1946. Nevertheless the member banks increased their cash dividends, from 267 million dollars in 1946 to 280 million dollars last year. This was possible in the face of lower earnings, bankers explained, because the banks carried over a certain amount of undistributed profits. For the first time since before the war, banks made more money on commercial loans than on United States Government securities.

AUTO OUTPUT: Detroit area auto makers today will start trying to make up for lost production this year, estimated at from 75,000 to 100,000 units. Industrial gas, cut off three weeks ago, is to be turned on again today and passenger car output is expected to rise to about 80,000 this week. Curtailment of industrial gas was due to extremely cold weather. Several auto firms plan to work six days this week.

ODD LOTS: Steel operations were scheduled this week at 92.5 per cent of capacity, off slightly from last week's 92.7 per cent . . . Ford engineers have developed an auto radiator fan whose operation and speed are controlled by a thermostat in the radiator hose . . . An issue of 15 million dollars of Illinois Power Co. first mortgage 3½s per cent bonds has been awarded to First Boston Corp. on a bid of 100.1499 . . . John S. Richards of Alexandria, Va., formerly with the Treasury Department, has been appointed director of foreign exchange for the international division of Ford Motor Co. . . . Oscar W. Koke will talk on "Cost Accounting in the Steamship Business" at a meeting tomorrow night of the Washington Chapter, National Association of Cost Accountants, at the Lafayette Hotel . . . Cecil F. Dawson has been elected president and C. L. Van Schaick executive vice president of Dixie Cup Co.

EARNINGS: Western Electric Co., Inc., controlled by American Telephone & Telegraph Co., reported 1947 net income of $32,291,123, equal to $3.59 a common share, compared with $11,326,676 or $1.51 a share for 1946. Other income reports included:

Easy Credit Era Is Ending, Banker Warns

Chicago, Feb. 16 (AP).—Distributors of construction equipment were told today that the era of easy bank credit is ending.

Credit is and will be increasingly tighter and will cost more, Kenton R. Cravens, vice president of the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co. of St. Louis said.

He addressed the twenty-ninth annual meeting of the Associated Equipment Distributors.

A tight credit situation will hit the distributors hard because their sales require longer term credit and because their financing is done by both banks and finance companies, Cravens said. Higher reserve requirements and rising interest costs are cutting ceilings on the credit available to the lending institutions, he added.

Cravens urged the distributors to form a strong financial connection immediately, budget their credit needs tightly, improve their working capital position, and prepare to pay more for loans and to charge more for credit to finance sales.

Visible Grain Supply

Chicago, Feb. 16 (AP).—Visible supply of wheat decreased 4,571,000 bushels to 88,088,000 bushels this week, the Board of Trade reported today. Corn increased 728,000 to 17,015,000 bushels, oats decreased 515,000 to 6,933,000, rye decreased 235,000 to 2,895,000, barley decreased 305,000 to 19,266,000 and soybeans decreased 303,000 to 8,779,000.

Retail Sales Up 8%

Independent retailers' sales in January were 8 per cent higher than in January 1947, although 30 per cent under record December business, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

Battle of the Triple Bottom Befogs Both Bulls and Bears

By J. A. Livingston

GEORGE G. BASS of Harris, Upham & Co., member of the New York Stock Exchange, is—luckiest of all men—a man of no doubts. He writes: "The question is asked: Why is the market going down? The primary answer is that we have been in a bear market since May, 1946." Everything that has happened since then follows logically for Bass. The market hasn't got anywhere, can't go anywhere.

Livingston

Mr. Bass keeps company with Heinz H. Biel, of Laird, Bissell & Meeds, also member of the Exchange, who writes: "The 16 - point decline in the Dow - Jones industrial average since the beginning of the year may be followed by a technical rally . . . but investors should take advantage of any price recovery to increase the liquidity of their portfolios. New bear market lows probably will be seen later this year."

Bass and Biel are members of what might be called the over-board brigade. You'd not know that if you've been busy with larger affairs, such as the presidential campaigning in the United States, or the London Economist's editorial on the difficulties of Britain, or the unsettlement of the Palestinian question, or the diplomatic diatribing between the United States and Soviet Russia over who caused the war.

THE OVERBOARD brigade believes that stocks are dear, that they will be available cheaper, and that therefore it's hardly a good idea to be long on them. They'd toss them overboard. But, as usual, Wall Street has its party of the second part. Laidlaw & Co. feels that "sound equities have discounted many of the unfavorable elements in the economic situation." And Norman Funk of E. F. Hutton & Co., thinks that "underbought investors might do well to give consideration to some selective 'accumulation'" of common stocks.

At the moment, the parties of the second part are in the minority and the bears are thirsting for blood. That's because the market's in a ritualistic, critical phase. From years of trial and error, experienced Wall Streeters have arrived at a working precept—the Self-attraction of the Lows. If stocks go down to 163, say, in October, 1946, then after a rally, they'll tend to slip back toward that level. And that they did in May, 1947. And then, perhaps, after another rally they'll back down again, which is what they did last week—on February 10. That's full of meaning and augury.

If industrial stocks were to crash through that level, then followers of the Dow theory would argue that the bear market has been reaffirmed. More than that, they'd sell stocks, making the decline that much more pronounced and violent. The optimistic bulls would be discouraged. They'd probably sell, too, hoping to buy back at lower prices.

ON THE OTHER hand, if common stocks were to resist the selling pressure—if common stocks were to ignore the sharp break in commodity prices, the signal would be the other way: A bull market. Then bears would rush to cover, and bulls would buy more. The whole business might be called the Battle of the Dow-Jones Averages. Do stocks go under or don't they? Note how industrial stock prices are still more than two points and the rails almost four points above their previous lows:

	LOW PRICES
Date	Industrials	Rails
October 9, '46	163.12	44.69
May 17, '47	163.21	41.16*
February 10, '48	165.65	48.13

*May 19.

In one respect, this market test differs from those of recent years. This time, railroad stocks—instead of being the weaklings—are strong. They're well above their lows of last year or the year before. So, instead of pulling down the industrials, they're tending to buoy them up — sympathetically and psychologically.

Chart readers are as concerned about what happens during the next few days as the Dow theorists. If both the rail and industrial stocks hold above the lows of the two preceding years, there'll be a Triple Bottom. Experience has shown that that is a bullish formation. So perhaps another name for this phase of the post-war stock market would be the Battle of the Triple Bottom. Will it hold or won't it?

The first skirmish of the week was won by the bulls, when on Monday both industrials and rails advanced to 168.30 and 49.11 respectively. It was the best rally of the new year.

New York Cotton

New York, Feb. 16 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 95 cents to $2.50 a bale higher today. Trading was active and the market developed considerable strength in sympathy with other markets. Mill buying was heavy in the nearby deliveries, with trade support also coming through short covering and replacement demand. Commission house and New Orleans profit-taking held rallying tendencies in check during early trading, but thereafter offerings were limited.

Goodyear Nets $10.93 a Share

Akron, Ohio, Feb. 16 (AP).—The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. today reported record peacetime sales of $670,772,647 for 1947, compared with $616,508,162 in 1946, the previous high mark. A Goodyear official also predicted rubber output would match demand for several years.

Net income for last year totaled $33,044,943, with $7,500,000 of this amount placed in reserve to meet possible losses in foreign investments. Net earnings after the reserve were equal to $10.93 per share.

The company reported net earnings of $51,211,784 in 1946, with 15 million dollars set aside for reserves and the remainder equal to $16.07 per share.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 16 (AP).—Grains staged a good rally on the Board of Trade today, sparked by an 8-cent upturn in May and July corn. It was the second consecutive session of mostly advancing prices following the break which got under way on February 4.

Some traders felt the action of the market in the last two sessions indicated prices now would stabilize around present levels. Others were not too sure. They insisted it was not certain the break had run its course. Few, if any, traders expected any immediate runup to previous 1948 highs.

Wheat closed 3¾ to 5¾ higher, May 2.40½@2.40⅝; corn was 5 to 8 cents higher, May 2.04⅜; oats were 1 to 4⅜ higher, May 1.07⅛@1.07⅜, and soybeans were 8 cents higher, March 3.33.

The action of corn was particularly heartening to grain men who felt the price break had gone far enough. This grain is considered the key to the present situation. It was the first to break. It had lagged when previous rallies were attempted. Today it was the strongest cereal.

With the upturn from last week's lows is fairly substantial, prices are well under 1948 peaks. Wheat is down 42⅝ to 66⅛ cents, corn 33⅝ to 66⅛ cents, oats 10⅜ to 22⅜, rye 31 to 61, and soybeans $1.08 to $1.09. In most cases the highs were made on January 16.

4th Virginia District to Elect Today

Petersburg, Va., Feb. 16 (AP).—The keenest campaign in the Fourth Congressional District in many years will reach a climax tomorrow when voters choose their representative in Congress.

Balloting was expected to hit above the 20,000 mark in the two cities and 15 counties comprisinb the district. The special election was called after the death of Representative Patrick H. Drewry in December.

Citizens will have their choice of four candidates. Three are Democrats—State Senator Morton G. Goode, Dinwiddie; Watkins M. Abbit, former Commonwealth's attorney of Appomattox County; Robert W. Arnold, Jr., Commonwealth's attorney, Sussex. The fourth is a Republican— T. Robert Cocks, Kenbridge manufacturer, first candidate his party has offered in a generation.

It was generally conceded that the real race was between Goode and Abbitt. Both are stalwarts of the State's dominant Democratic organization, which is headed by United States Senator Harry F. Byrd.

Neither, however, has been given the green light by the organization.

Baby Sitter, 14, Saves Child, 5, In Baltimore Fire

Baltimore, Feb. 16 (AP).—Sunny Freihoff, 14, was a baby sitter's heroine today because she did some fast thinking when a basement fire spread to the bedroom of her 5-year-old charge.

Martin Hunovice, 5, was asleep, his parents were at the movies, and Sunny heard crackling flames. A basement fire was sending smoke and flames through the floorboards.

Sunny snatched Martin out of bed, parked him on the front porch, ran back in to telephone firemen, then took Martin to a neighbor's house. It took firemen an hour to put out the fire, which burned out the cellar and part of the first floor.

Martin's mother gave Sunny a wristwatch she had been saving for Sunny' birthday next July.

Full Fater Flow Is Restored at Harper's Ferry

Harpers Ferry, W. Va., Feb. 16 (Spl.)—Full flow of city water here has been restored after an acute shortage last week forced closing of grade schools for half a day.

"How long it will last, we don't know," Dr. S. G. Moore, health officer, stated today. He said an inspection Friday afternoon revealed that pumps of the Harpers Ferry Water Co. were not pumping and that the chlorinator was dry.

State Public Health Department authorities stated that the town's supply was unsafe as well as scanty Friday, but by Saturday pumping was restored and Dr. Moore said the water was safe. Friday afternoon the grade school was forced to close because of lack of later prevented sanitary facilitites from working.

A mass meeting of citizens of the community has been called for 7 p. m. tomorrow to consider steps to be taken for a permanent supply.

Postlude

Two-Piano Music Done Superbly

By Donald Engle

Occasionally an ardent Sunday concert-goer in Washington can hear a program nearly every hour on the hour, beginning at mid-afternoon, so we started out on the town yesterday with four or five items on our itinerary.

First to Constitution Hall for an hour of superb two-piano music, by the husband-and-wife team of Vitya Vronsky and Victor Babin. Unlike many such duo recitals, this program consisted almost entirely of music originally composed for the two instruments, including the delightful little Mozart Sonata in D, Rachaninoff's Second Suite, Copland's Danzon Cubano, and Babin's own interesting and well-written Etude No. 3.

Variety of texture and color abound in their playing, coupled with a broad range of light and shade. They have tremendous tonal power for such moments as the Telemann Fantasia or the Introduction to the Rachmaninoff Suite, yet it is equally thrilling when scaled down to a delicate whisper for the moving lines of a Mozart slow movement. Add to this the quiet ease with which everything is achieved, and you have not only an enjoyable afternoon, but a highly satisfying musical experience.

Phillips Gallery

Our next stop was the Phillips Gallery for a sonata recital by a father and son combination: Louis Potter, jr., cellist, and Louis Potter, sr., pianist. In sonatas by Handel, Beethoven and Faure, young Potter evoked a full-bodied, robust tone in the lower registers of his instrument, particularly in those low-lying passages of the Beethoven opus, but it was somewhat timid and lacking in brilliance in the upper reaches. Noted particularly was the close rapport between the piano and cello, and the excellent balance the two artists maintained throughout.

National Gallery

At the National Gallery last evening pianist Robert Goldsand presented a recital of works by Beethoven, Griffes, Chopin and Paganini-Liszt. Goldsand is an accomplished artist, at his best in contemporary works and those requiring a poetic approach. Thus he reached truly great heights of pianists in the Griffes Sonata, but in the Beethoven Sonata, opus 10, No. 2, and the Andante favori, his liberties with the dynamics and rhythm were not those of the composer. The Liszt transcription of Paganini's La Campanella, with which he closed his program, was without doubt the most exciting performance we have heard this season.

Man Charged In Baltimore Police Slaying

Booked on the slaying charge was Roy Arnold Wood, from Whitehall, in nearby Harford County.

He was picked up last night in an elaborate police trap sprung by a pretty young widow, Mrs. Mary Bates Tolliner, 30, who had been going with him about three months.

Police charged Wood with several armed holdups, including the taxicab robbery which Patrolman Benedict was investigating at the time he was slain.

Wood was identified in a police lineup by the driver of the cab from which Benedict was shot and by Sergt. Fred Mann, who was with Benedict.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

This One Would Confuse Even a Philadelphia Lawyer

Lawyer Harry Wender ambled toward the elevator on the seventh floor of the Woodward Building.

On the corridor floor he spotted a peculiarly colored disk. Picking it up, Wender saw that it was a button.

Another tenant arrived to join the vigil for the elevator, and to make conversation Wender remarked, "Looks like somebody lost a button off his suit."

"I hope he doesn't have as much trouble matching the button as I've had," replied the stranger.

"I lost a button off this suit and tried every tailor in town—but nobody can match it. They tell me it's a special button. Guess I'll have to go back to Massachusetts to get it matched."

The elevator arrived and the two men stepped in.

"That's too bad," sympathized Wender as they rode down. "It must be a very unusual type of button if it's that rare."

"Oh, it is," said the other fellow as he unfastened his overcoat. "See?"

Wender looked at the unlost buttons on the stranger's suit, and at the stray button in his hand. It was a perfect match.

"Where'd you say you lost your button?"

"In Massachusetts, several weeks ago."

Wender handed over the button as the elevator reached the ground floor.

"Here," he said, "You're welcome to it. And please don't try to explain it to me. You'll just confuse me some more."

PIED TYPE DEPT.

The inadvertent omission of "timepiece" after the word "accurate" certainly changed the meaning of the following advertisement of a combination radio and clock:

"When not in use as an alarm clock it also serves as a silent but accurate and good-looking radio."

The demand for silent radios seems to be as great today as it was when Post Preview was on the air.

SQUARES WON'T DIG THIS

Constance Steel of 1743 P st. nw, wonders why the song "Dance Ballerina, Dance" made what she calls "such a smash-bang hit with the jumping jive set.

"In other words, why did those who prefer boogie woogie take to a melancholy tune like 'Ballerina'? This has stumped me for a long time. Can you explain it?"

No, I can't, Constance—but maybe the jive set can.

GRRRRR!

It never fails.

Having started the morning by shaving myself (much closer than any barber does), I decide that it's time for either a haircut or violin lessons.

So I take my glistening face and shaggy head into the closest barber shop, where the man behind the chair invariably greets me with:

One of these days I'm going to snarl: "No, shave me again."

A somewhat similar situation arises every time I put on a brand-new pair of shoes. The moment I arrive downtown, street urchins besiege me with cries of:

"Shine 'em up, mister? We'll make 'em look like new again."

GREETINGS

Our recent mention of the Montana State Society brings this note from Mrs. S. H. Glidden of 7239 Allentown rd.:

"My father was a member of the Montana House of Representatives; my husband was in the Senate; I grew up in Montana, and my children were all born in that grand old State.

"So will you please extend my greetings to the Montana State Society and wish them success in their work?"

COMPETITOR

District Liner Ray H. Everett will be the guest speaker at this Thursday's meeting of the John and Bernard Wilner Post, Auxiliary 381, Jewish War Veterans.

Ray is executive secretary of the Social Hygiene Society, has edited the Journal of Social Hygiene, and is nationally recognized as a first-flight marriage counsellor—so he's well qualified to discuss his subject, "Courtship and Marriage."

A very able guy, in short. But he'll never take the place of Mary Haworth, I'll betcha.

VERY APPROPRIATE

There was a story in the papers recently about a fellow who stole three guns and pawned them to get money for liquor.

Hank Hawkins of 4701 S. 7th st., Arlington, Va., thinks that the headline writers missed the boat. He suggests:

Swipes 3 Guns; Gets Half Shot

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK — When Frank Craven opened in "Our Town" and received the finest notices of his career, his son told him: "I'm so glad, and proud of you. After all these years—still a star" . . . "Take it easy, boy," replied Craven. "I remember when I got my first starring contract and rushed to your grandmother who was dying. She said to me, 'It's nice. And don't worry about me. When I was a young girl I wanted only 3 things—a fur coat, a diamond ring and $1,000 cash. Well, son—I've had 'em all'."

Ben Bernie used to tell of his early days when he worked as a single and searched for a booking. One day an agent told him that if Bernie had a partner who would agree to do a twin routine with him, the agent would get them $15 as a team, for one performance . . . "What did you do?" Bernie was asked . . . "I did what any other vaudevillian would have done," he confessed. "I went straight to Harry Rose and said: 'Harry, how'd you like to make 6?'"

Victor Francen, the distinguished French actor, saw John Barrymore in "My Dear Children." After the first act Francen went to the box office and told the man: "Mr. Barrymore is drunk. As an actor I must confess to professional regret at not having received the full satisfaction of a Barrymore performance" . . . The box-office man started to refund his money. "I don't want a refund," Francen insisted. "I want to see the real Barrymore. Here's my phone number. When you're sure that Mr. Barrymore is sober, let me know and I'll come to see the show" . . . Two weeks later the box-office man telephoned, and Francen saw the show.

When Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh opened on Broadway in their short-lived "Romeo and Juliet," the cast included Halliwell Hobbes, the veteran screen actor . . . Richard Whorf came to see the show, which was a flop, and then visited Hobbes backstage, to compliment Hobbes on the excellence of his performance. "I didn't catch your name," said Hobbes . . . Whorf repeated it, reminded him of their meeting in Hollywood. "I don't remember," said Hobbes and walked away. Then he returned and again asked: "What did you say your name was?" . . . "Whorf," said the actor-director, "Richard Whorf" . . . "And you say you liked our show?" Hobbes continued. "Yes," said Whorf . . . "Then," said Hobbes, departing, "send customers."

Frank McCauley once was hired as a straight man for Reggie Gardner in "The Show Is On." This was a musical produced by Harry Kaufman for the Shuberts . . . Gardner then asked Kaufman for a $35 allowance for the purchase of a deodorized skunk. "It isn't necessary," Kaufman told him . . . "It is," Gardner insisted. "It'll help us get a few more laughs" . . . "$35 for a deodorized skunk is a lot of money," Kaufman told him. "After all, Reggie, didn't I just get you a new straight man?"

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Bradley Party Skips Brass Hats

By Drew Pearson

Kindly Gen. Omar Bradley, known as the GI's best friend, had a birthday last week. He was 54 and his birthday fell on the same day as Abraham Lincoln's.

McCabe

Having just been made Chief of Staff, the top brass of the Pentagon Building were in something of a twitter as to who would be invited to the general's birthday party. It was known in advance that a party was to be thrown in the Chief of Staff's office, but nobody could figure out who was on the guest list.

As the time of the party arrived, the mystery was easily solved. Those invited were the clerks, secretaries and enlisted men who worked in Bradley's office. None of the brass hats were present except for one man—Bradley's old friend, General Eisenhower.

Morgan Man

Harry Truman will soon have a Morgan man governing the banking system of the United States. That will be the situation when likable Tom McCabe steps into his new job as governor of the Federal Reserve Board.

Most people around Washington haven't realized it, but McCabe's brilliant climb up the business ladder, plus his equally meteoric rise in government has been due not only to a winning smile and shrewd business technique, but to the constant backstage backing of the house of Morgan.

The smartest move McCabe ever made was when, as sales manager for the Scott Paper Co. in 1927, he floated a loan with Drexel & Co. (part of the Morgan combine) and with that loan became president of Scott paper.

The Hand of "J. P."

McCabe and the Scott Paper Co. have stuck close to the Morgan crowd ever since. And working together they have made Scott the foremost toilet tissue company in the world. From a volume of about five million dollars when McCabe arranged the Drexel-Morgan financial hookup in 1927, the company now has an annual volume of around 60 million dollars.

It was the son of a Morgan partner, Ed. Stettinius, who gave McCabe his meteroic boost up the ladder of government. The J. P. Morgan interests had put Stettinius into the chairmanship of the United States Steel Co., and while still in that position, Stettinius became a member of the Business Advisory Council to the Department of Commerce. He also helped get his friend Tom McCabe a similar position on the Advisory Council.

And from that point on, wherever Stettinius went, McCabe went with him. When Stettinius joined the Council of National Defense, McCabe became his executive assistant. When Stettinius became director of priorities, McCabe became deputy director. And when Stettinius let the big steel and aluminum crowd pull the wool over his eyes and postpone new steel and aluminum plants, McCabe, who also failed to back the big steel and aluminum companies, moved with Stettinius over to the Lend-Lease Administration.

There McCabe was Deputy Lend-Lease Administrator to Stettinius. Finally when the son of the Morgan partner became Secretary of State, McCabe moved into the State Department in charge of liquidating United States property overseas.

So, step by step, gracious, delightful Tom McCabe and his Morgan friends have moved down the lane of business and government together. It has been a pleasant and profitable association—for both. And it will be interesting to see who benefits most from Tom's new and all-important job as Federal Reserve Governor—his old banking friends or the public.

What Became of Vaughan?

The President's swashbuckling military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan, ducked out the other night on the ladies of the American Legion Auxiliary at Alexandria, Va. He was supposed to speak on universal military training, and a big crowd had gathered.

Even the mayor showed up—but not General Vaughan.

"He must be running some important errand for the President," hopefully suggested Mrs. Penn Howard, chairman of the American Legion Auxiliary.

But two hours and four substitute speakers later, she was still urging the ladies to be patient.

Merry-Go-Round

Idaho's Senator Glen Taylor has been passing out free sacks of Idaho potatoes, and one arrived at the Democratic National Committee for Gael Sullivan, just as the Southern Democrats boiled over against the President's civil-rights message. Wrote back Sullivans: "Thanks for the spuds! I think I'll put them in the cellar here, so if I have to hole up against the Confederate Army, I'll have something to subsist on. Looks like the siege of the Potomac is on!" . . . Congressman Gerald Landis of Indiana has turned the tide of GOP opinion in favor of a higher minimum wage. The same key Republicans who last year blocked his efforts to raise the wage floor are now willing to accept a 20-cent boost—from 40 to 60 cents.
